THIS popular Directory contains classified lists of the Manufacturers, Merchants, Traders, Agents, and Dealers throughout the Kingdom, and embraces over One Thousand Three Hundred Scottish Cities, Towns, and Villages. Each is annually canvassed personally by competent Agents, solely employed on the Company's Publications. The type is kept standing, thus reducing errors to a minimum. In the Gazetteer Section brief notices are given of the Cities, Towns, Parishes, Villages, and other territorial divisions in the Kingdom. Some idea may thus be formed of the labour and cost of collecting and arranging the information, and of the utility of the Work as a reliable Book of Reference.

PRESS OPINIONS.

The Times

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—The work which Messrs Kelly have done so long and so successfully for London, and for England and Wales, Messrs Wm. Macdonald & Co., Ltd., Edinburgh, have accomplished for Scotland and for its two capitals. Many thousand names have been added to this edition. All possible justice is done even to the most distant parts of Scotland. . . . The work is thoroughly business-like in its scope and object.

The Scotsman

"The Scottish Directory and Gazetteer" is a useful and well-arranged book of business addresses covering the whole of Scotland. . . . Much credit is due to the compilers for their enterprise and industry in collecting the information. The general arrangement of the Directory remains the same as before. . . . In this issue the work has been thoroughly revised and brought abreast of recent changes

The Daily Record (Glasgow)

Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Ltd., the Directory and Time-Table specialists, Edinburgh, send us a copy of their "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer," which has been thoroughly revised to date, and now presents trade lists which will probably bear the minutest inspection as to accuracy. At anyrate, in a few rather difficult tests to which we have subjected the Directory, we have found it correct.

Glasgow Herald

. . . The Directory, which has over 1000 pages, is furnished with a general map of Scotland and plans of the leading towns. The Gazetteer portion is a very useful feature, as it contains a list of the towns and villages of Scotland alphabetically arranged, together with brief information regarding population, &c. The book has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date, and the lists have been considerably extended

Birmingham Daily Record

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Ltd., Edinburgh, the Kellys of North Britain, have just issued another annual and much-enlarged edition of their practical, useful, complete, and admirably compiled "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer." . . . Above all, the paper is far superior to that of most publications of the kind, and the book is stoutly bound.

Dundee Advertiser

The edition for 1900 of this valuable work has now been issued. Though there are no new features in this year's volume the arrangement is so complete that there is little left to be desired in this respect. The book is practically a carefully compiled Trades' Directory for Scotland, issued at a reasonable price. The Gazetteer gives in a concise form much topographical information, arranged alphabetically, and is most useful as a book of reference.

Edinburgh Evening News

"Macdonald's Scottish Directory and Gazetteer" is altogether astonishingly comprehensive. The volume is first of all practical, and has been carefully compiled. Since the last edition was issued the Directory has undergone a complete revision, and many new names have been added. . . The arrangement of the book is good, and it is sure to be of service to business men and the public generally. The index is clear and complete.

Evening Times (Glasgow)

This is one of those bulky volumes which no well appointed office, hotel, or public institution can afford to be without. . . . It contains all the information which a business man requires in a Directory of Scotland. . . . The usefulness of the volume is enhanced by an appended Gazetteer, which gives the leading facts about every city, town, and village in Scotland. It is clearly printed on good paper, and strongly bound in red cloth.

Iron (London)

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—Messrs Wm. Macdonald & Co., Ltd., occupy in Scotland the position filled by Messrs Kelly & Co. in England, and their "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer," although necessarily not so bulky as the "London Directory," will be found to be as carefully compiled.

Invention

We are very pleased to welcome a new edition of this most useful work. It will be observed that great care has been taken in its compilation. The paper on which this work is printed is wonderfully strong and good, and the whole appearance of the Directory is such as should cause Messrs Kelly to look to their laurels. . . . In conclusion, we may say that all possible justice has been done to the subject-matter dealt with, and the general arrangement of the information contained.

Liverpool Mercury

The work of compilation of this comprehensive Directory has been ably carried out, and should be welcomed by commercial houses seeking a reliable trade directory.

Manchester Guardian

"Macdonald's Scottish Directory" is a useful compilation, which combines a commercial Directory and brief Gazetteer for the whole of Scotland.

Newcastle Chronicle

The present issue, which has been carefully brought up to date, and includes many thousand additional names, fully justifies the claim of the work to take a high place among publications of its kind

Leeds Mercury

A new edition has been issued of this valuable and carefully-compiled work—a bulky volume, each edition being larger than its predecessor.

Indispensable to every Counting-House, Library, Club, and Hotel Commercial Room.

THIS well-known Directory contains exhaustive classified lists of the Manufacturers, Traders, Merchants, Agents, and Dealers in upwards of Five Hundred Irish Cities, Towns, and Villages, besides a comprehensive Gazetteer Section, giving the location, population, and other local statistics for the Cities, Towns, Villages, and Parishes, with Postal, Telegraphic, Railway, and Shipping Information. The usefulness of the work is enhanced by copious lists of Merchants and Traders in Liverpool and Glasgow,—the British Cities which have the most extensive trade with Ireland. The whole of the information is thoroughly revised every year by a staff of qualified compilers, solely employed on the Company's Publications, and the work thus brought up to date, and printed from type kept standing (reducing errors to a minimum), is unrivalled as the Standard Directory of Ireland.

PRESS OPINIONS.

Belfast Evening Telegraph

A new Edition of this excellent Directory has been issued, bringing the contents completely up to date. The success of former editions has warranted extensive additions and improvements, while a Gazetteer has been added, thus increasing the usefulness of the book as a work of reference. A further great improvement consists in the inclusion of sections devoted to the cities of Glasgow and Liverpool—the two trans-Channel centres most in touch with the Irish ports. This is an addition which will be widely appreciated.

Scotsman

Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Limited, Edinburgh, have sent out a comprehensive and carefully compiled Trades Directory of the whole of Ireland. . . . . well revised and more useful than ever to business men.

Glasgow Herald

. . . The new edition has been thoroughly revised and brought down to date. . . . A section is devoted to directories for Liverpool and Glasgow, the business relations of these cities being considered sufficient reason for this useful addition to a very valuable reference book.

Edinburgh Evening News

The extensive business relations between Scotland and Ireland justify a large circulation for this Directory, which is a model of careful arrangement. Sections are added, dealing with Liverpool and Glasgow firms, and those give a more general value to the Directory. The Gazetteer is a useful addition to the book.

Belfast Irish News

This well-known firm issued some time ago a handsomely-bound "Directory for Ireland" for 1897-98, which has had a great popularity. It is certainly one of the completest works of its kind ever published, and advertisers in all parts of Ireland and across Channel will find a study of it of the greatest advantage for business purposes. It is clearly printed and splendidly bound.

Dundee Advertiser

. . . A practical and carefully compiled trades directory for the whole of Ireland. . . . The work has been thoroughly revised since last issue, and additional sections giving directories of Liverpool and Glasgow are now included in the volume. The book will be of great service to all trading with merchants in Ireland.

Glasgow Citizen

. . . Several new features will be noted in this new Edition. A Gazetteer has been added, and two large sections are devoted to a trade directory of Liverpool and Glasgow, the cities which have the most extensive trade with Ireland. The whole volume has been enlarged, improved, and brought thoroughly up to date, and as it at present stands it is an invaluable compilation for all those business men who have connection with our sister Island.

Northern Whig.

. . . The book is calculated to be very valuable for reference to merchants and manufacturers. Sections devoted to Liverpool and Glasgow will be particularly useful, as the trade relations of Ireland with these ports are so intimate.

Derry Journal

. . . It is a desirable work of reference in business centres, and will have considerable appreciation in that connection. The publishers have wisely included sections for Glasgow and Liverpool, and Irish traders will find this convenient. The compilation on the whole is very correct, and the arrangement and letterpress are good.

Irish Times

In the "Irish Directory" merchants and traders will find all the special information for which they have hitherto looked in vain. The book contains the most exhaustive alphabetical and classified lists of the principal merchants, traders, &c., in Irish business towns.

Freeman

Seldom has a work deserved its title better than that which we have now before us; it is, indeed, in the fullest sense, a complete and perfect "Business Directory of Ireland," comprising within its pages compendious alphabetical and classified lists of all the principal manufacturers, merchants, shippers, and traders in all the chief cities, towns, and trade centres. The work reflects much credit on the care, industry, and patience employed by its compilers.

Morning Mail

We have nothing but praise for the arrangement of the compilation and the excellent taste with which the volume is brought out. We believe that such a work is one that must appeal strongly to the business public of the whole Kingdom, or that part of it having commercial dealings with Ireland.

ALBAN'S, ST, OR VERULAM, Herts., a market town and municipal borough, situated on the river Ver., has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. There are several churches, chapels for Nonconformists, and a Roman Catholic chapel; also a town-hall, an ancient clock tower, a grammar school founded by King Edward VI., a blue-coat school, and some alms-houses, the chief of which are the Marlborough buildings, built by Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough. St Alban's arose from the ruins of the ancient Verulam. In the ancient abbey is the tomb of Offa, king of Mercia. Of the abbey erected by Offa in 796, in honour of St Alban, the first martyr in Britain, not the least vestige remains, except the gateway. The abbey church is interesting to the antiquary and those who study architecture. It is built in the form of a cross, running 556 feet from east to west, and having a breadth of 206 feet from north to south along the transepts. Its tower has an elevation of 148 feet; it is crowned with battlements. Every style of architecture from the time of the Saxons to that of Henry VII., may be traced in it. The abbot of St Alban's was mitred, and as a peer of the realm had a seat in Parliament. In 1455 and 1467 two fierce battles were fought in the neighbourhood of St Alban's between the partisans of the houses of York and Lancaster. BATH, Som., a city and municipal and parliamentary borough and market-town, picturesquely situated on the river Avon, and long a fashionable resort for pleasure and the benefit of its mineral waters. Has R. S., and head P. O. with all depts. It is well and regularly built of freestone, having many beautiful edifices, and presenting a fine appearance. Its principal buildings are the abbey church, St James's, enlarged and nearly rebuilt in 1844, and further restored by Mr Gilbert Scott in 1864, St Michael's, and a church dedicated to St John the Baptist; the assembly and concert rooms; a guildhall, a club-house, a theatre (rebuilt in 1863), the Bath Mineral Water Hospital, and the baths and various buildings connected with them, and the Bath Home for Nurses. It has a literary and philosophical institution, a mechanics' institute, and a public subscription library. There are many churches in the city belonging to the Establishment, besides those above mentioned, with chapels for the Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Independents, and other denominations. The Free Grammar School was founded by Edward VI.; there are many proprietary and other schools in the city and the neighbourhood. There is also a handsome Wesleyan college, called New Kingswood. Among the various charitable institutions and hospitals, the hospital of St John is the most remarkable. The hot springs, to which the city principally owes its celebrity, were in use among the Romans. There are several public baths, the property, and under the direction, of the corporation. The temperature of the different springs varies from 93 to 117 degrees of Fahrenheit, and the waters are useful in bilious, nervous, and scrofulous complaints, palsy, rheumatism, gout, and cutaneous diseases. The city enjoys the luxury of a park, and other public places of recreation. Bath is of great antiquity, and was known to the Romans under the appellation of Aquae Solis Fontes Calidi. In conjunction with Wells, it forms a bishopric, which embraces the whole of the county of Somerset, with the exception of a part of Bristol. Both the cathedral and palace of the bishop, however, are at Wells. Bath returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 51,844

BEDFORD, OR BEDS, an inland county, bounded on the north and north-west by Northamptonshire, on the east by the counties of Huntingdon, Cambridge, and Hertford, and on the west by the counties of Buckingham and Northampton. It is generally level, or slightly undulating, except on the south, where it is crossed by the Chiltern Hills. The western and eastern parts of the county are, in many parts, sandy; the centre is flat, and three-fourths of the whole is judged to be alluvial soil. Limestone, coarse marble, and imperfect coal are obtained here; and a variety of fossils and petrifactions. Bedfordshire is the most exclusively agricultural county of England, and is famed for its market gardens. It returns one member to Parliament for each of its two divisions, Biggleswade and Luton. Area, 295,582 acres. Pop. 160,704

BEDFORD, Beds., a market town and municipal and parliamentary borough, the chief town of Bedfordshire, on a fertile tract of the Ouse, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It has several churches, the oldest of which is St Peter's, while St Paul's is the largest. St Cuthbert's, Trinity, and St Paul's have recently been restored and enlarged, and the tower and spire of the last-named rebuilt. There are also chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Independents, and other denominations. John Bunyan (who was born at Elstow near Bedford), was pastor of the old chapel, belonging to the Congregationalists, in Mill Street, after suffering twelve years' imprisonment in the jail here. There is a free grammar-school, founded by the corporation under letters patent from Edward VI., and endowed by Sir William Harpur (Lord Mayor of London), who also left a fund for providing marriage-portions for poor young women and for apprenticing boys. The commercial school is one of the best in England. The annual income of the Harpur charity is nearly £16,000. The town also contains a hospital and infirmary, shire-hall, gaol, library, subscription rooms, corn exchange, cattle market, and numerous charity schools. There is a handsome stone bridge of five arches over the Ouse, also an iron bridge. A battle was fought here between the Britons and Saxons in 571. The castle, built at the commencement of the 10th century, was situated at the back of the Swan Inn, but little if any trace of it can be discovered. An extensive trade is carried on in corn, coal, timber, malt, and agricultural implements. Bedford returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Monday and Saturday. Pop. 28,023

BEDFORD LEVEL, an extensive tract of flat land known as the Fens in the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Huntingdon, Northampton, Lincoln, Cambridge, and the isle of Ely, consisting of about 700,000 acres, a large portion of it being marshy ground. At various periods several persons have endeavoured to reclaim this immense tract, but it was not accomplished till the 17th century, when the Duke of Bedford effected what had baffled all previous attempts. It produces fine crops of grain, flax, and cole-seed. It is drained by large sewers or dykes, furnished with outfall sluices and flood-gates

BERKELEY, Glouc., a market town, situated on the Little Avon, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It has a church in the style of the later Norman and Early English architecture, which is the burial-place of the celebrated Dr. Edward Jenner. This town is famous for its castle, begun in the reign of Henry I. and finished in that of Stephen. The room in which King Edward II. was imimprisoned and murdered, in 1327, is still to be seen. Market day, Wednesday. Pop. 890

BERKHAMSTEAD, Herts., a market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town has the remains of an ancient castle, defended on one side by a double, and on the other by a triple, moat. It has a church, with a number of small chapels attached to it, several places of worship for dissenters, and an endowed grammar school. It was formerly a Roman station, and the kings of Mercia afterwards resided in the castle. A wittenagemot, or Saxon parliament, was held in it in 697, and Ina's laws were published here. Cowper, the poet, was born in this parish in 1731, while his father was its rector. Pop. 5034

BERKS, OR BERKSHIRE, an inland county, bounded N. by the counties of Oxford and Buckingham, from which it is separated by the river Thames, E. by Surrey, S. by Hampshire, and W. by Wiltshire. It is one of the most beautiful of English counties, has an undulating surface, rising in some parts into hills under 900 feet. The remains of British and Roman camps are to be found in many parts of Berks. On the hills to the N. of Lambourn is the rude stone structure known as "Wayland Smith's Cave," and near this is White Horse Hill, remarkable for having the figure of a horse cut in the turf on its side, probably in commemoration of a victory gained by the Saxons over the Danes. In this county there is a great deal of chalk lying in beds, and strata of fossil shells are found below the surface. A considerable portion of its eastern part is occupied by Windsor Forest, which is estimated to be 56 miles in circuit, including a great part of Bagshot Heath. In many other places it is well clothed with timber, particularly oak and beech. Eivers, the Thames, Kennet, Loddon, Ock, Aubourn, and Lambourn. Berks returns three members to Parliament, one for each of its three divisions, viz., Abingdon, Newbury, and Workingham. Area 451,210 ac, or 705 square miles. Pop. 238,446

BERWICK-ON-TWEED, commonly so called, but designated as Berwick only by postal authorities, is a municipal borough and market town, situated at the mouth of the river Tweed, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Although for parliamentary and other county purposes it is now considered as being part of the county of Northumberland, the town with its liberties, or parish in which it stands, used to form a county by itself, without any connection whatever with the neighbouring counties of Northumberland in England and Berwick in Scotland. It is connected with its suburbs, Tweedmouth and Spittal, by a bridge over the Tweed, which has 15 arches, and measures 1164 feet long and 17 wide. The town-house is a handsome structure, with a stately spire, 150 feet high, in which there is a peal of eight bells. It has a fine corn exchange, with a spacious hall for public meetings and entertainments, news-rooms, library, &c. The barracks, with the storehouse, form a handsome square; and the parish church is a spacious building. There are other places of worship for Presbyterians and Nonconformists. It has a long pier, which was begun in 1811, and which shelters the harbour, and stretches a long way into the sea, and a wet dock, constructed in 1873-76, at a cost of £40,000. This town was long the theatre of many sanguinary combats between the English and Scotch, before it was finally ceded to England in 1502. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 13,378

BIRKENHEAD, Chesh., a market town, and municipal, parliamentary, and county borough, on the left bank of the Mersey, opposite Liverpool, with which it is connected by the Mersey Tunnel, 1230 yards long, opened 1886. It sprang into existence principally through the construction of shipbuilding and commercial docks, which may be said to have been commenced in 1824, when the late Mr W. Laird, the eminent shipbuilder, transferred his establishment thither from Liverpool. The docks are extensive, and have splendid quays, wharves, warehouses, &c. It has a magnificent park, of 180 acres, laid out at a cost of £140,000, in its immediate vicinity, and at Tranmere is a public park, which cost £33,000. It also possesses several churches and chapels for Roman Catholics and Nonconformists of different denominations, and several public buildings, among which may be named the town-hall, county court-house, free public library, market-hall, workmen's hall and club-house, music-hall, and theatre. Among the educational institutions are the Albert Memorial Industrial Schools, and St Aidan's College, founded in 1846 for the purpose of training candidates for holy orders in the church of England. Birkenhead has been aptly styled the "city of the future," and well deserves the appellation. By means of its docks and the railways with which it is connected with other parts of England, it enjoys facilities possessed by very few ports. Birkenhead returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 99,857. Constant communication is maintained with Liverpool by means of a steam-ferry

borough, the capital of the Midlands, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It stands near the centre of England on the river Rea, and embraces within its boundaries the neighbouring townships of Aston, Edgbaston, &c., has suburbs extending to Staffordshire and Worcestershire. It has a great many places of worship for almost every denomination, including the Roman Catholic cathedral, dedicated to St Chad; of the Episcopal churches, St Martin's is the oldest; has various charitable establishments, such as King Edward VI.'s free grammer-school, founded in 1552, and rebuilt in 1835 in the Tudor style, from designs by Sir Charles Barry; the Blue-coat school, established in 1722; the Dissenters' charity school, and several others. In addition to these there is Oscott College, a Roman Catholic institution, the Queen's College, for the study of theology and medicine, and the Mason Science College, founded in 1875, by the late Sir Josiah Mason. There is a convent of the Sisters of Mercy in Birmingham; and it possesses several charitable institutions, among which may be named the New General Hospital, opened in 1897; the Dispensary for the relief of indigent sick persons at their own residences; the Queen's hospital, Lying-in hospital, Homœopathic hospital, Children's hospital, institutions for diseases of the eye and ear, and for the cure of deformities, asylums for the deaf, dumb, and blind; a Magdalen institution, and other excellent charities. It also contains handsome theatres. The town-hall, where assemblies and public meetings are held, is one of the most magnificent structures in the town. It is built of Anglesey marble, in the Grecian style of architecture, occupies a commanding site, and is capable of accommodating 8000 persons standing, or 4000 seated. Its organ is one of the finest in the kingdom, and the triennial musical festivals which are held in this building, are unsurpassed throughout the country. Close to the town-hall is the Birmingham and Midland Institute, completed in 1866, and containing a public library and museums, art gallery, reading and lecture rooms, &c. The new exchange was built in 1865. There is a museum at Aston Hall, in the adjoining parish of Aston, and the ground which surrounds it has been converted into a public park. The town has also many places adapted for public recreation and amusement, including Adderley Park, Calthorpe Park, and other five parks. Birmingham is supposed to have been a place for the manufacture of arms even in the time of the ancient Britons. In the time of Henry VIII. it was chiefly inhabited by "smithes that used to make knives, and all manner of cutting tools, and lorimers, that make bittes, and a great many nailours." The manufacture of fire-arms was introduced after the Revolution in 1688. During the Russian war, in 1854-5, the Government contracts amounted to £30,000 per month, and now over 50,000 gun-barrels are manufactured annually. It took the side of Parliament in the Civil War, and was partially destroyed by fire by the cavaliers under Prince Rupert. It has often suffered from riots, particularly in 1791 and 1839. Birmingham returns seven members to Parliament. Market days, Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday. Pop. 478,113

BRISTOL, Glouc and Som., a city, municipal and parliamentary borough, market town and seaport, situated on the river Avon, which is here joined by the Frome. It has R. S., and head P. O., with all depts. The town is irregularly built, and part of the abbey of St Augustine, founded by Robert Fitzharding about 1140, has been converted into a cathedral, which is the principal edifice in the city. Bristol contains about fifty Episcopal churches and chapels, and several chapels for Nonconformists, and places of worship for all denominations. The church of St Mark, opposite the cathedral, was formerly collegiate; it is the mayor's chapel. Nearly all the churches are beautifully decorated, and most of them contain many handsome monuments. The muniment-room of St Mary's, Redcliffe, contains the chest in which the unfortunate Chatterton said he had found the poems he attributed to Rowley the monk. The fine old church (at one time declared by Queen Elizabeth to be the "fairest and most famous parish church in England") has been thoroughly restored, and several of the older churches have been renovated. Of the churches that have been recently built the chief are St Raphael's, St Luke's, St Bartholomew's, Emmanuel, and St Silas. The city also contains many large educational institutions and charity-schools, among which may be named University College, Clifton College, and the free grammar-school, and those of Henry VII. and Queen Elizabeth, and the Red Maid School. Colston's Hospital and School has been removed out of the city to Stapleton, the bishop's palace there having been purchased to be converted into the necessary school buildings. In addition may be named Muller's orphan-house, on Ashley Downs. The exchange is a fine edifice of Grecian architecture, and there is a structure called the commercial rooms, for the use of the mercantile interest, as well as a free library. The largest and most important public buildings are the Merchants' Hall, council-house, the town-hall, Colston's Hall—a large and spacious concert and assembly room, named after one of Bristol's most liberal philanthropists—the Fine Arts Academy, the Workman's Hall and Club-house, the Athenæum, a custom-house, the gaol, Bristol Institution, the Victoria Rooms, the baths at Clifton, and numerous bridges. Among the chief charitable institutions are St Peter's Hospital, Bristol General Hospital, two dispensaries, an eye infirmary, with asylums for orphans, the blind, and the deaf and dumb, a lying-in institution, and other similar societies. Bristol has long been the centre of a large and important foreign trade, mainly with the West Indies, and commercial enterprise is also carried on on a large scale with Ireland. The city was made an independent county in 1372 by Edward III. It was constituted a bishop's see by Henry VIII., and has since been endowed with various privileges and immunities. In 1836 the bishopric was united to the see of Gloucester. In 1848 it was made a free port. About a mile west of Bristol, close to the river, stands the village of Clifton Hot Wells, a large and fashionable suburb of Bristol, much frequented by invalids on account of the tepid spring. Bristol was the first port of Great Britain to accomplish steam communication with America. Sebastian Cabot, the discoverer of Newfoundland, was born at Bristol, also Bailey the sculptor, Chatterton the poet, Bowditch the African traveller, and the poet Southey. Its manufactures are both varied and important, including the extensive factories of the celebrated firm of J. S. Fry & Sons, Limited, the oldest and largest cocoa and chocolate manufacturers in the kingdom, employing over 2600 workpeople; also the works of W. D. & H. O. Wills, the well-known tobacco manufacturers. Bristol returns four members to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 221,578

BRISTOL CHANNEL, a portion of the Atlantic Ocean, on the coast of Great Britain, lying between the south coast of Wales and the counties of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall. CAMBRIDGE, Cam., a market and university town, and a municipal and parliamentary borough, situated on the river Cam, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Cambridge is the seat of a famous university and the centre of a rich agricultural district. The university—said to have been founded about 630—is made up of a number of different colleges and halls, viz.:—St Peter's, Clare Hall, Pembroke, Caius, Trinity Hall, Corpus Christi, King's, Queen's, St Catherine's, Jesus, Christ's, S. John's, Magdalene, Trinity, Emmanuel, Sidney, Sussex, Downing, Cavendish, Selwyn, Averst, also Girton and Newnham colleges for ladies. The University also possesses a large and very valuable library, senate house, Pitt Press, museum, and an observatory. Behind the Round Church are the university union buildings, with a large and spacious lecture hall. Each college has its own statutes, by which it is governed; but the government of the colleges, as a confederation, rests with a senate composed of two houses, the members of which have the degree of doctor of law, physic, or divinity, or master of arts. The university sends two members to the House of Commons, who are chosen by this senate. Cambridge has several Episcopal churches, the most noteworthy being —Great St Mary's and the Round Church. The town has also a free grammar-school in connection with Caius College; Addenbrooke's Hospital, a county gaol, near a fine open space of ground known as Parker's Piece; a sessions house, near the site of the old castle, and a guildhall in the market-place, containing a large assembly room, a free library, and school of art. A market-hall has been built on St Andrew's Hill, and the Albert Asylum, an institution for aged tradesmen of the town The town returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday, but a market is held daily for meat, fish, butter, &c. Pop. 36,983

CAMBRIDGESHIRE, an inland county, bounded on the north by Lincolnshire, north-west by Northamptonshire, north-east by Norfolk, east by Suffolk, south by Essex and Hertfordshire, south-west by Bedfordshire, and west by Huntingdonshire. The county is very fertile, especially in the north, where the crops of wheat and oats are very abundant; it has also prosperous dairy farms, and cheese factories. The south and south-west districts are very pleasant where the land is elevated; the rest of the county is bleak, but healthy. The chief rivers are the Great Ouse, the Cam or Granta and the Nen. The county returns three members to Parliament. Area, 525,182 acres.

CANTERBURY, Kent., a city and market town, and a municipal and parliamentary borough, situated on the Stour, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town consists of four principal streets, built in the form of a cross, and was formerly surrounded by walls, traces of which still remain, and its spacious and magnificent cathedral, of which Canterbury is justly proud, of ancient architecture, was built on the site of the first Christian church of Saxon England. It is in the form of a double cross, 545 feet in exterior length, and 156 feet in its greatest breadth at the eastern transept. The height of the vaulted roof is 80 feet, and that of the great tower 235. The windows are magnificent specimens of stained glass, both ancient and modern. There are several other churches in the town, the most noted being St Martin's, St Mildred's, St Margaret's, All Saints, St Gregory, and the Church of the Holy Trinity, and several other places of worship of different denominations, also the missionary college of St Augustine's, erected on the ruins of a monastery, and a high school, grammar school, the Clergy Orphan school, and the Simon Langton schools. Besides a number of charitable institutions, the town possesses a spacious guildhall, a philosophical institution, a museum, a gaol, a theatre, a music hall, a school of art, and barracks both for cavalry and infantry, also a military hospital. An elevation, known by the name of Dane John, which is encompassed by the city wall, is supposed to have been thrown up by the Danes. It forms the chief promenade of the citizens, as the old ramparts have been converted into terraces. The archbishop of Canterbury is the first peer of the realm and Primate of all England, and takes precedence next to the Royal family; he crowns the sovereign in Westminster Abbey. The Old Chequers Inn, celebrated by Chaucer, is still in existence. St Thomas a Becket was assassinated in the north transept of the cathedral. Canterbury returns one member to Parliament. The chief trade of the city is in corn and hops. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 23,062

CARDIFF, Glam., a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and seaport, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. A navigable canal, 25 miles long, constructed among the mountains, communicates with Merthyr Tydvil, whence a great quantity of cast and wrought iron is brought. The town contains several churches, and numerous chapels for Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and Nonconformists of different denominations, and a synagogue for Jews; a townhall, a county gaol, law courts, a market house, baths, an infirmary, a county lunatic asylum, and a theatre. Cardiff returns one member to Parliament. Owing to the great extension of the coal and iron trade, Cardiff is now one of the principal seaports and shipping towns on the western coast of England and Wales. It possesses magnificent docks, from which upwards of 16,000,000 tons of coal is shipped annually. Cardiff is an ancient place, and is surrounded by walls, in which were four gates. Its castle was at one time strongly fortified. Robert, Duke of Normandy, was confined in it for a long period of years. This fortress was afterwards taken and partially demolished by Cromwell, but still forms an interesting object, much of its ancient grandeur having been preserved or restored. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. The town had a population in 1801 of 1000, and is now estimated to have a population of 128,915

CARLISLE, Cumb., an Episcopal city, market and county town, inland port, and municipal and parliamentary borough, is situated near the junction of the rivers Eden and Caldew, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. In former times it was a military post of great strength, having a citadel and a castle, in which the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned in 1568. The place of her promenade preserves remembrance of her under the name of the Lady's Walk. Carlisle suffered severely in the Civil Wars for its having espoused the cause of Charles I. In 1745 it surrendered to Prince Charles Stuart, but was retaken by William, Duke of Cumberland. The castle is said to have been first built in the 7th century, by Egfrid, king of Northumberland, but the erection of the present building and the walls is ascribed to William Rufus. In the town are several handsome residences; the market-place occupies the centre of the town, which also possesses a town hall, guildhall, gaol, council chamber, infirmary, county lunatic asylum, theatre, assembly rooms, libraries, and philosophical and mechanics' institutions. There are several Episcopal churches, that of St Stephen's being a very handsome structure, besides several chapels for Nonconformists of various denominations. The cathedral ranks as the chief ornament of the city, and can be seen for many miles around, adjoining is an ancient priory. The town is also a great railway centre, and carries on a considerable trade; there are several foundries and breweries. Carlisle returns one member to Parliament. CHATHAM, Kent., a municipal and parliamentary borough on the river Medway, adjoining Rochester, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Here is one of the finest naval and military arsenals in the world, containing vast magazines and warehouses, in which all kinds of war material is stored. The Government works include a dockyard 2 miles in length, metal mills, mast and rope houses, machinery for cutting blocks and huge forges; also extensive barracks for infantry, royal marines, artillery, and engineers. There is a hospital for aged seamen and their widows, founded by Sir John Hawkins in 1592. A fund was instituted by Queen Elizabeth for the relief of the sufferers in the Spanish Armada called the Chatham Chest, but it was removed to Greenwich in 1802. Chatham is defended by strong and elaborate fortifications. The church contains some handsome marble monuments; and there is a chapel-of-ease of ancient architecture, supposed to have been part of a hospital for lepers. There is also a neat and elegant chapel, built to accommodate the officers, artificers, and their families. Several Episcopal churches and chapels for Nonconformists of different denominations. The town possesses a mechanics' institute and library, and lecture halls. Fort Pitt, a strong fortress, built in 1803, is also used as a military hospital. There are also very extensive fortifications called the Lines, which are defended by ramparts, palisadores, and a broad deep ditch. In the river opposite the town, hulks are moored for the reception of convicts, who labour in the yard. Considerable additions have lately been made both to the docks and to the fortifications that surround and protect the town. Various statues adorn the town, one of which is to General Gordon, the hero of Khartoum. Pitt, the eminent statesman, derived his title the Earl of Chatham from this town, which sends one member to Parliament. Market day, Friday. Pop. 31,901

CHESHIRE is a maritime county, bounded north by Lancashire, north-west and west by the counties of Flint and Denbigh, south-east and east by the counties of Derby, Stafford, Salop, and part of Flintshire. The surface of the county forms an almost level plain. It is hilly towards the east, and is well wooded. The chief rivers are the Mersey, the Tame, the Dee, the Weaver, and the Bollin. There is in addition a fine system of canals, including the greater part of the Manchester Ship Canal. This county is famed all over the kingdom for its dairy produce, especially the manufacture of Cheshire cheese, which is estimated at 15,000 tons annually. The minerals found in the district are copper, lead, cobalt, and coal; but the principal is rock salt, of which many thousand tons are taken yearly from the pits near Northwich. The manufacture of silk, cotton, linen, ribbons, thread, buttons, and leather is extensively carried on. Area, 707,078 acres. Cheshire returns eight members to Parliament.

CHESTER, Chesh., an Episcopal city, market town, and parliamentary and municipal borough, the chief town of Cheshire, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The river Dee, which is navigable here, is crossed by two bridges. It is surrounded by walls, which form a favourite promenade of the citizens. Four principal streets, with piazzas, called the "Rows," lead from four gates, all terminating, as it were, in a centre at the cross. It is the only city in the kingdom whose ancient city walls remain intact. The Bishopric of Chester was founded by Henry VIII., in 1542, and the church of St Werburgh was converted into the cathedral of the new see, the revenues of the monastery, of which the church formed a part, being appropriated to the support of the chapter. The building, which is constructed of soft red sandstone, consists of a nave and side-aisles, choir, lady-chapel, chapter-house, and cloisters and has a tower, springing from four lofty pillars. The construction of the whole building exhibits many interesting subjects to the architect and the antiquary. There are a number of Episcopal churches in Chester besides the cathedral, and places of worship for the Unitarians, Quakers, Baptists, Wesleyans, and other Nonconformists. The remains of the old castle have been taken down, and a new structure erected in its stead, which serves as a town hall and county gaol. At one end of the castle yard are barracks, and on the other side is an armoury for 30,000 stand of arms. The most important public buildings are the exchange, the union hall, appropriated for Manchester and Yorkshire goods; the linen hall, the theatre, the infirmary, the county lunatic asylum, and mechanics' institute, market hall and exchange; also a large public park on the banks of the Dee. There is a free grammar school, which is called the King's School, and is under the control of the dean and chapter, besides national and other schools. Chester is a very quaint and picturesque place, and its walls appear to have been the work of the Romans. In Trinity Church are the tombs of Matthew Henry, the Bible commentator, and Parnell the poet. Chester returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 37,105

CHILTERN HILLS, Bucks., a ridge of chalky hills of England between Tring in Herts., and Goring in Oxfordshire. Their principal summit is Wendover, which is about 900 feet above the level of the sea. The office of "Steward of the Chiltern Hundred" was established for the purpose of suppressing the depredators who, in former times, infested the forests with which the sides of these hills was covered; and it has been retained to enable members of the House of Commons to resign their seats in that assembly by accepting this office under the crown. The duties of the office are merely nominal, and there are no emoluments attached to it, as it is retained for no other purpose than that which has been already mentioned, because a member of Parliament is unable to relinquish his seat under any other condition. This is the only office which is in the gift of the Chancellor of the Exchequer

COLCHESTER, Essex, the ancient Camalodunum, is a market town, a river port, and municipal and parliamentary borough, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It was once encircled by walls, parts of which are still standing, although they are but ruins. The town itself is one of the most ancient and historical towns of England; it is said to have been the first Roman town in Britain. It contains the remains of a castle, an abbey, and a priory, a number of Episcopal churches, of which St Peter's is the oldest, having been built before the Norman Conquest, and several chapels for Nonconformists of various denominations. There are numerous charitable institutions, and a town-hall, two corn exchanges, gaol, a custom house, barracks, a theatre, a county house of correction, market house, literary and scientific associations, and an asylum. Colchester is now a large military depot. The town contains some large iron foundries and vinegar works, and malting and brewing are also carried on. Oysters, dredged from the Colne, are carried as an article of traffic to London, Colchester "natives" being highly esteemed there. There is a fine quay on the river, which can accommodate vessels of 150 tons burthen. Colchester returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 34,559

CORNWALL, a maritime county, forming the south-west extremity of England, and surrounded by the sea, except on the east side, where it is bounded by Devonshire—the river Tamar forming the chief part of the boundary-line between the two counties. The Cornish, which is a dialect of the Celtic, has only become extinct within the present century. The Scilly Islands lie about 36 miles south-west from the Land's End, and are supposed to have been at one time connected with Cornwall. The intermediate and surrounding rocks are innumerable, and Druidical antiquities abound in these islands, and in all parts of the county. A ridge of hills extending from north-east to south-west, through its entire length, renders its appearance bleak and dreary. There are also some beautiful and fertile valleys, watered by numberless small streams, interesting from the romantic scenery with which they are associated. The coasts are rocky and broken by a succession of deep bays, enclosed by bold and steep headlands of granite, which project into the sea. The chief rivers are the Tamar, Seaton, Fowey, Fal, Hel or Helford, Heyl, Looe, and the Alan or Camel. The climate is variable, and subject to heavy rains, but, on the whole, mild. Myrtles and other tender plants, also a large quantity of fruits are grown here with great success. The most important minerals found in the district are silver, zinc, lead, copper, tin, antimony, manganese, cobalt, bismuth, and granite. One of the most interesting of the Cornish minerals is the loose white kaolin or porcelain earth, formed by the decomposition of granite, which is used in the manufacture of porcelain. It is raised in great quantities near St Austell, and forms a principal ingredient in the earthenware manufactures at the Staffordshire potteries. A great variety of fish frequent the coasts of this county. The pilchard and mackerel fisheries are especially valuable, and absorb a large amount of capital. Cornwall returns six members to Parliament. Area, 873,600 acres

COVENTRY, Warw., a city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It was formerly enclosed by walls, and many of its houses have still an antique appearance. It has a number of Episcopal churches, among which may be named St Michael's Church, a beautiful specimen of the English or Pointed style of architecture, Trinity Church, and several chapels for Nonconformists. The town possesses many charitable institutions, hospitals, and almshouses, a free school, St Mary's Hall, the Drapers' Hall, the County Hall, a large and spacious building containing a school of art and library, a corn exchange, county hospital, barracks, and theatre. Coventry is a place of great antiquity. Frequent parliaments were convened within its walls by the ancient monarchs of England, some of whom occasionally resided in it. It was the favourite residence of Edward the Black Prince; and Queen Elizabeth took great delight in seeing "the game of Hock Tuesday" performed in it. This pageant represented the destruction of the Danes by the English, in 1002. For Pageants, however, the people of Coventry were always distinguished; and, to this day, the procession of Lady Godiva is still kept up at intervals of two or three years with great splendour. Coventry returns one member to Parliament. The town is famous for the manufacture of watches, bicycles, and silk fabrics. Market day, Friday. Pop. 52,724

DERBY, WEST, Lanc., a suburb of Liverpool. Pop. 114,673

DERBYSHIRE, bounded north by Yorkshire, east by Nottinghamshire, south by Leicestershire and Staffordshire, and west by Staffordshire and Cheshire. Derbyshire returns seven members to Parliament. The county is mountainous and picturesque towards the north-west, on which account this portion of the county is called the High Peak, while the eastern and southern parts are called the Low Peak. They are rich and well cultivated, and the surface is more level. In the High Peak, the scenery is of the most romantic kind, the greatest elevation being the peak near Ashop Moor, which is about 2000 feet above the level of the sea. It has throughout many wild caverns, incrusted with stalactites of various forms, among which the one called the "Devil's Cave," or "Peak's Hole," is the most remarkable; all of them, however, contain some singular curiosities. The principal rivers are the Trent, Derwent, Wye, Amber, Rother, Dove, Mease, Goyt, Dawley, and Erewash. Mineral springs are numerous; among which those of Buxton, Matlock, and Bakewell are particularly celebrated, and much frequented. The chief products are oats in the north, where much of the land is kept as pasture ground for cattle, and where, as in the south, dairy farming is extensively carried on. In the High Peak large numbers of sheep are reared, but they are of a small size. The minerals found in the district are lead, iron, coal, gypsum, lime, and a substance that is well known by the name of Derbyshire spar, which, in a variety of singular forms, is found suspended round the sides and tops of the limestone caverns. There are also extensive quarries of grit, which afford excellent millstones and grindstones. Besides these, crystals, called Derbyshire diamonds, jaspar, chalcedony, and terre-vert are also found. In the north-east of the county there are iron works and manufactories; and many persons find employment in cutting and polishing marble and Derbyshire spar, either for useful or ornamental purposes. It also manufactures woollen, linen, cotton, and silk goods; calico-printing is carried on, and there are tan yards, paper mills, and hat and porcelain manufactories. Area, 658,803 acres

The town contains numerous churches and chapels for Nonconformists, barracks, military hospital, assembly rooms, theatre, and official residences for the port admiral and general in command of the western district. Market days, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 54,803. Devonport returns two members to Parliament

DEVONSHIRE, a maritime county, bounded north by the Bristol Channel, east by the counties of Dorset and Somerset, south by the English Channel, and west by the county of Cornwall. Devonshire returns eight members to Parliament. About three-fourths of the county is under cultivation. Dartmoor (q.v.) occupies a considerable part of its south-western half. The climate being mild and equable, this county has become a favourite resort with invalids. The chief rivers are the Exe, Tamar, Torridge, Teign, Taw, Dart, and Axe, nearly of all which have estuaries, which form good harbours. Plymouth Sound and Torbay are on its south and south-east coasts, and between these are the excellent harbours of Dartmouth and Salcombe. It produces wheat, barley, oats, fruit, and vegetables; excellent cider is made, and there is a great trade in dairy produce. Devonshire butter is said to be unsurpassed, a special product being clotted cream. The Devonshire breed of cattle is highly valued; and large flocks of sheep are fed on Dartmoor. The coast fisheries are extensive and very valuable. The minerals found in the district are antimony, bismuth, cobalt, copper, lead, tin, iron, gypsum, and manganese. A beautiful kind of veined marble, called Devonshire marble, susceptible of a high polish, is also found. It manufactures druggets, serges, and coarse woollen fabrics, leather shoes, lace, and earthenware. Shipbuilding and malting are carried on at the various ports. Area, 1,657,180 acres

DURHAM, a maritime county, bounded north by Northumberland, east by the German Ocean, south by Yorkshire, from which it is separated by the river Tees, and west by the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland. The county is mountainous and heathy in the west, but considerable progress has been made in agriculture. There are also some very fertile valleys. The chief rivers are the Derwent, Skerne, Wear, Tees, and Tyne. It is noted for the rearing of sheep and cattle. Lead, iron, grinding-stones, and marble are found in the district, and there are extensive coal mines, which cover a large area. The manufacture of cordage, glass, pottery-ware, also shipbuilding, is extensively carried on. There are, besides, numerous iron works and foundries. This county returns eight members to Parliament

ESSEX, a maritime county, bounded north by the counties of Cambridge and Suffolk, east by the German Ocean, south by the river Thames (which separates it from the county of Kent), and west by the counties of Hertford and Middlesex. The county is diversified with a gentle alternation of hill and dale. On the coast the land is broken, and indented by arms of the sea, which form a series of islets and peninsulas. Extensive salt-marshes also border the coast, the greater part of which is protected by embankments from the inroads of the ocean. The principal rivers are the Colne, the Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Crouch, the Ingerbourn, the Roding, and the Cam. Besides these, it is bounded by the Thames, the Stour, the Stort, and the Lea. The soil is generally well adapted for agricultural pursuits, and its farming is placed among the best in England. Its principal crops consist of wheat, barley, oats, beans, peas, turnips, teazels, saffron, caraway seed, and hops. Many of the inhabitants of the towns and villages on the coast are employed in its oyster fisheries, which are valuable. Essex returns eight members to Parliament. Area, 1,060,549 acres

GLAMORGANSHIRE, is the most southern county of Wales, is bounded on the west and south by the Bristol Channel and on its other sides by Carmarthen, Brecon, and Monmouth. The south part, which comprehends the low land along the sea coast, and a district which extends for some miles into the interior, is richly wooded, and has a very mild climate; it is called the "Vale of Glamorgan," or "Garden of Wales," and is one of the most fertile parts of the county. From this base, however, the land rises rapidly towards the north, forming itself into mountains of considerable elevation. The principal rivers are the Rumney, Taff, Ely, Tawe, Avon, Neath, and the Loughor, which divides the county from Carmarthenshire. There are also canals, the chief being Cardiff to Merthyr Tydvil, the Neath, the Swansea, and the Aberdare. The usual crops are wheat, barley, and oats. Grazing is carried on to a great extent, and it is famed for its horned cattle, also its sheep and horses. In the uplands large quantities of cheese and butter are produced. The county is rich in minerals, to which it owes its present importance. The minerals found in the district are ironstone, coal, limestone, and small quantities of lead and copper The coal not only supplies the numerous iron works of the county, but furnishes an important article of export trade, and draws also to the neighbourhood immense establishments for the smelting of copper, the ore being transported for this purpose from Cornwall, North Wales, and Ireland; the iron is also exported in great quantities, and affords at the same time the materials for extensive tin-plate manufactories, the tin being also brought from Cornwall. It is noted for its vast collieries, and numerous iron and copper mines. Glamorganshire returns five members to Parliament

GLANFORD BRIGG, OR BRIGG, Linc., a market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It has a church, and several chapels for Nonconformists, a free grammar school, and a corn exchange, which is a handsome building. The town has a trade in corn and timber. Market day, Thursday. Pop. 3100

GLASTONBURY, Som., a market town and municipal borough, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Some of the houses in the town are either entirely built, or patched up with stones from its abbey, formerly the most magnificent in the world, and covering an area of 60 acres. Its domains and revenue were immense. There are still interesting remains of great architectural beauty, the part called the Abbot's Kitchen being still in a very good state of preservation; it is built entirely of stone, without any combustible materials. The ruins of Joseph of Arimathea's chapel, which still remains, are very beautiful. There are also other structures of especial interest to the lover of antiquity, among which may be mentioned an ancient market cross; St George's Inn, formerly the hospitium; the gate house, now also an inn; and the hospital of St John. The old walls that remain are overgrown with ivy, and the aspect of the whole place is at once melancholy and venerable. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 4233

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, situated along the vale of the Severn, bounded on the north-west and north-east by the counties of Hereford, Worcester, and Warwick, on the east by Oxfordshire, on the south by Berks, Somerset, and Wilts, and on the west by the estuary of the Severn. The county is varied by hill, vale, and forest. The Severn and the Avon mark out an extensive vale of the richest soil, having a most mild and healthy climate, and being every way adapted to the culture of corn and fruit, and the rearing of cattle. The district is divided into Upper and Lower, or the vales of Gloucester and Berkeley. On the west of the Severn, and entirely detached by it from the rest of the county, rises an elevated district, occupied principally by the Forest of Dean; while on the east of the Severn, and parallel with it for the distance of 6 or 8 miles, the range of the Cotswold Hills runs through the whole of the county, from Bath, on the Lower, nearly to Evesham, on the Upper Avon, which is chiefly devoted to the pasture of sheep. The principal rivers are the Severn, Wye, Isis, and Upper and Lower Avon. In the Vale of Berkeley the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in dairy farming and rearing cattle. The shire is famous for its cheese and butter. The double Gloucester or double Berkeley being of a very superior quality. There are large orchards, and great quantities of perry and cider are manufactured annually. The principal minerals are coal, iron and limestone. The coal supplies the immense consumption of the Bristol and Bath manufactories. There are, besides, blue claystone, freestone of excellent quality, with stone tiles, found on the Cotswold Hills, and paving stones and grits in the forest. Clifton and Cheltenham have long been noted for their mineral waters. It is chiefly engaged in the manufacture of tin-plate, edge tools, brass wire, wire cards, pins, and nails, also superfine broad-cloths of Spanish wool, thin worsted stuffs, carpets, stockings, rugs, blankets, and felt hats. Gloucestershire returns five members to Parliament

GLOUCESTER, OR GLO'STER, Glouc., an Episcopal city, market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough, on the Severn, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The public buildings are handsome, but the chief object of interest is the cathedral of St Peter, originally one of the finest Benedictine abbeys in the kingdom. The architecture is very ancient and beautiful; its pinnacled central tower is 225 feet high, and contains the "Great Peter" bell. Other objects of interest are the lofty round piers of the nave, and an exquisite stained-glass window, the largest in England. The shrine of King Osric, a canopied shrine of Edward II., fine fan-vaulted cloisters, and a statue of Jenner, all of matchless beauty. This fine old building has been repaired and restored, and a new Episcopal palace was built in 1862. There are some handsome parish churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, several chapels for Nonconformists, and a synagogue. The college school, the free grammar school of St Mary-le-Crypt, and other educational institutions, including a school of arts; hospitals, a cattle market, corn market, and other market houses, a custom house, a theatre, a county gaol, built on the site of the ancient castle, a county hall, an eye infirmary, a lunatic asylum, and a county infirmary. It has a public park, with a mineral spring and a statue of Raikes, the founder of Sunday schools. There is a canal which connects Berkeley with Bristol. Gloucester returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 39,444

GREENWICH, Kent, a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. of London. It is celebrated for its hospital, which is built on the site of an old palace, the birthplace of Henry VIII. and his daughters Mary and Elizabeth. It consists of four extensive quadrangular buildings or wings. King Charles's building, designed by Inigo Jones, Queen Anne's, Queen Mary's, and King William's buildings were designed by Christopher Wren. In the middle of the square is a statue of George II., sculptured by Rysbrach out of a single block of white marble. The introduction of out-pensions greatly decreased the number of in-pensioners, thus Greenwich Hospital was disestablished by the votes of the men whom it was intended to benefit. Queen Mary's building comprises the chapel, built on the site of a former edifice, and designed by Stuart. The "Shipwreck of St Paul," painted by B. West, for the altar-piece, and the hall is adorned with pictures of great naval battles and their heroes. The coat which Nelson wore when he was shot at Trafalgar is still preserved here. The pensioners were for the most part, aged and maimed seamen of the navy, many of whom had been wounded in battle. But it has now ceased to be a retreat for aged but hale and hearty sailors, the former inmates having now become out-pensioners, who are provided for by an annual grant from Parliament, with the exception of a few infirm old men, who are still retained there as in an infirmary, and now none but sick or disabled men are admitted as inmates. The manor of Greenwich was acquired by the crown at the time of the Conquest, and has ever since remained in the hands of the Royal family. Greenwich Park was detached from the palace when this became part of the hospital, and is still in the hands of the crown. The ranger's lodge now forms the centre of the naval asylum, designed for the support and education of the orphan children of seamen. All naval officers must now take their degree at Greenwich. On a rising ground in the park, and commanding one of the most varied prospects that can well be conceived, stands the Royal Observatory, for ever celebrated by its association with the names of England's greatest philosophers. Greenwich returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 57,240

HAMPSHIRE, OR HANTS, officially the county of Southamptonshire, a southern maritime county, including the Isle of Wight, bounded south by the English Channel and the Solent, between the mainland and the Isle of Wight, north by Berkshire, east by Surrey and Sussex, and west by Wiltshire and Dorsetshire. It is distinguished as an agricultural district, though its sea coast has rendered it of considerable commercial importance. The county is well wooded, and it is traversed by the ranges of the North and South Downs, attaining an altitude of 940 feet above sea level at Sidown Hill, and on the Berkshire border, at Inkpen Beacon, 1011 feet, and the south-western part of the county is mainly occupied by the New Forest. There are a number of rivers, the most important being the Auburn and Loddon, falling into the Thames; the Anton, the Itchin, the Avon, and the Bolder Water, which empties itself near Lymington, all navigable. Along the coast, and in the Solent, which divides it from the Isle of Wight, are numerous excellent harbours and roadsteads; Portsmouth being the principal harbour. Hampshire is noted for its cattle and live stock, especially hogs and sheep, also the famous Hampshire bacon. The county returns five members to Parliament. Area, 1,070,216 acres

HEREFORD, Herts., a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and Episcopal city, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is situated in a beautiful and richly-cultivated valley, and has broad streets and well-built houses, although many of them are old. The cathedral, which is very ancient, is built in the form of a cross, with a small transept and a chapel; the north porch is particularly admired; but the incongruous west front impairs the general effect of its beauty. It has also several parish and district churches, and chapels for Nonconformists. The principal public buildings are the bishop's palace, county gaol, shire hall, the corn exchange, an ancient grammar school, and guild-halls, an hospital, free library, &c. Only a small part of its ancient city wall remains; and the site of the castle, called the Castle Green, now forms an agreeable promenade. During the Civil War it held loyally to the cause of the king, and was one of the last places that yielded to the Parliament. The house of Bohun took their title of earl from Hereford, and the Devereux family now take that of viscount from it. It was the birth-place of David Carrick. Hereford returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 20,267
HEREFORDSHIRE, is bounded north by Shropshire, south by the counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, east by Worcester, and west by Brecknock and Radnor. The aspect of the entire county is beautiful and picturesque in the extreme; gentle eminences rising in every direction, with intervening valleys, everywhere covered with plantations, orchards, and meadows, enclosed with hedges and rows of trees, and the soil in the highest state of cultivation. The climate is very healthy. The chief rivers are the Wye, Frome, Lug, Arrow, and Munnow; and there is a canal between Ledbury and Gloucester, and another from Leominster to Tenbury in Worcestershire. Wheat and barley, also apples, pears, and hops, are grown, and are of excellent quality. The apple crop, which is larger than that of any other county except Devonshire, produces annually many thousands of hogsheads of superior cider. The cattle and sheep are held in the highest estimation. The minerals found are red and yellow ochres, and tobacco-pipe clay. Fuller's earth is dug near Stoke, and iron-ore is found on the borders of Gloucestershire. Herefordshire returns two members to Parliament Area, 833 square miles. Pop. 115,949

It contains several churches, also chapels for Nonconformists, a sessions house, a town-hall, a gaol and penitentiary, literary and scientific institute, and corn exchange. It has a preparatory school belonging to Christ Church

Hospital, London, and a grammar school. There are still a few remains of a very ancient castle. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 7232

HERTFORDSHIRE, OR HERTS, bounded south by Middlesex, north by Cambridge and Bedford, east by Essex, from which it is partly divided by the river Lea, and west by Buckingham and Bedford. Its boundaries are chiefly artificial, and very irregular. The soil of Hertfordshire is naturally barren; but its vicinity to the metropolis has contributed to fertilise and enrich it; so that it is a very considerable agricultural county. The climate being very healthy, makes it a favourite place of residence. A ridge of chalk hills skirts the northern boundary, and divides the waters of the Ouse on the north from those which flow southward through the county to the Thames. The principal rivers are the Ouse, the Lea and its branches, the Maran, Beane, Rib, and part of the Stort; the Colne, Verlam, and New River. Hertfordshire returns four members to Parliament. Wheat, barley, oats, turnips, hay, and watercress are cultivated for the London market. The woodlands of Hertfordshire are extensive. A great trade in malt is carried on in this county. The most important manufactures are straw plait, paper, and silk; and there are also large chemical works. Area, 391,141 acres. Pop. 220,162

HOLYHEAD, Anglesey, an island, seaport, and parish, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is situated off the west coast of the isle of Anglesey, with which it is connected by a long causeway, which may be crossed at low water. The town is irregularly built, and has assembly rooms, a church, several chapels for Nonconformists, and a market place. It is now a place of considerable importance, being a railway terminus and a port for the mail steam packets to Dublin. A harbour protected by piers and breakwaters has been constructed, to allow vessels to land or sail at any state of the tide, and a lighthouse has been built on one of the piers. At the west extremity of the island is another small island, called the South Stack, on which another lighthouse has been erected. Holyhead is also connected with Kingstown, near Dublin, on the Irish coast, by a submarine telegraph, which is 75 miles in length. It is for the most part a barren rock, but in parts it affords good pasture for sheep. It terminates to the north in a bold headland composed of serpentine rock, which has been hollowed out by the ocean into many caves, the haunt of sea-fowls. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 9610

HOLY ISLAND, OR LINDISFARN, Northumb., an island, 8 miles south-east from Berwick-on-Tweed, which is connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus or neck of sand, which can be crossed at low water, 5 miles from Beal R. S., has P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Beal. The town is on the south of the island, and is much frequented for sea-bathing. In a bay on the east is a small harbour affording shelter during easterly gales, and it has also the ruins of an ancient castle, and those of an old abbey. It is a continued plain, about 9 miles in circumference, one-half consisting of sandhills, which form a rabbit-warren, the remainder being fertile. Pop. 440

HOLYWELL, Flint., a market town and parliamentary borough, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It forms part of the Flint district of boroughs. There are mines of lead, copper, coal, and zinc in the district, also extensive quarries of limestone. Its easy access to the sea, and the vicinity of the Flintshire coal pits, render its position advantageous for an export trade in the mineral products mentioned. The celebrated well of St Winifred, before being diminished by drainage works, sent forth every minute upwards of 1000 gallons of the purest water. The town is well built; it has a parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and several chapels for Nonconformists. Market day, Friday. Pop. 9471

HULL, OR KINGSTON-UPON-HULL, Yorks., a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary and county borough, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is the centre of a considerable and rich district. One of the most important seaports on the east coast, has a splendid harbour, which is artificial, having been formed by deepening and widening the channel of the river, and large and spacious docks have been erected for the accommodation of shipping. Of these, the Old Dock enters immediately from the river Hull, about 300 yards from its mouth, and covers, with the commodious wharves and quays that surround it, an area of 13 acres. The Humber Dock covers a space of more than ten acres. It opens into the Humber by a lock, which admits large vessels. The Junction Dock connects the Old and Humber Dock. There are also several dry docks for repairing vessels; the Railway Dock and the Victoria Dock and adjacent basin, which is as large if not larger than the Old Dock. In addition to these, a dock, called the West Dock, connected with the Humber Dock, has been constructed. It carries on a very extensive trade with the Baltic, north of Europe, and German ports; and large fleets of boats, in conjunction with Grimsby, are employed in the fisheries. There are a large number of chapels for different denominations of Nonconformists, and several handsome churches, the oldest of which is the church of the Holy Trinity, a large and beautiful structure of exquisite workmanship; the churches dedicated to St Mary, St John, St Peter, and Christ Church are neat and commodious buildings. There is also a floating chapel for mariners, and a Jews' synagogue. It has some important charitable institutions, the oldest of which is the Trinity House, for the relief of decayed seamen and their widows; the Charter-house hospital for the support of poor pensioners; and there are, besides, several other hospitals and almshouses for the poor. There is also a grammar school, and a great many private schools, and a proprietary school, known as Hull College. The other public buildings are the custom house, the exchange, corn exchange, a handsome town-hall, the pilot, dock, stamp, and excise offices, theatres, concert hall, library, mansion house, mechanics' institute, lyceum and athenæum. A neat equestrian statue of William III. stands in the market place, and at the end of Junction Street there is a column surmounted by a statue of Wilberforce, who was a native of this town. There is a statue of the Queen in Pearson Park at Sculcoates. Wyke-upon-Hull was the ancient name of this town, but in 1296 Edward I., who saw its great natural advantages, purchased it, and called it Kyngeston-upon-Hull. He began the formation of the harbour, and thus the prosperity of the place commenced. By the end of the 13th century it had so progressed that its exports amounted to one-seventh of those of the whole kingdom. It has various flourishing industries, such as chemical works, tanneries, sugar refineries, shipbuilding, and seed crushing for oil; and it manufactures ropes, chains, canvas, machinery, &c. Hull returns three members to Parliament. Market days, Monday, Friday and Saturday. Pop. 199,991

HUMBER, one of the largest rivers of England, dividing Yorkshire from Lincolnshire. It is formed by the junction of the Ouse, the Aire, and the Trent, and, draining, with its tributaries, nearly one-fifth of England. At the mouth of the Trent, where the Humber properly begins, the river is more than half a mile in breadth. It thence flows in an easterly direction, receiving in its course the Foulness, the Hull, the Anchholme, and the Ludd, gradually widening until it attains a breadth of 3 miles, and it empties itself into the German Ocean, between the promontory of Spurn Head and Saltfleet, in a vast estuary, 6 or 7 miles wide. On its Yorkshire bank stands Hull, on its Lincolnshire bank Great Grimsby

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, a county, enclosed by the counties of Cambridge, Northampton, and Bedford. It is almost entirely an agricultural county. The north and north-east parts consist of fens, which constitute a portion of the midland division of that extensive tract of land known as the Bedford Level (q.v). Towards the west and south the land rises considerably, leaving an intermediate valley for the waters of the Ouse, which traverses the south angle of the county, and for various streams which fall into it from the valleys between the hills. The climate is mild and healthy, except in the fens where it is very unhealthy, owing to the impure water and damp air. The uplands originally formed one large forest, and were used for hunting, from which the county derived its name. Wheat, oats, beans, turnips, rape, hemp, and mustard seed are produced. Butter is made in large quantities, and horses, cattle, and sheep are reared in great numbers. The most celebrated article of consumption made in Huntingdonshire is the cheese termed Stilton, which was formerly made at a village of that name not far from Huntingdon. Huntingdonshire returns two members to Parliament. Area, 229,544 acres

JERSEY, one of the Channel Islands, and the largest and most southerly of the group, situated about 15 miles west from the coast of France, and belonging to Great Britain. It has numerous bays, the principal being St Catherine, St Brelade, St Helier, St Ouen, Grouville, St Aubin, and Boulay. The coast is surrounded by a natural barrier of rocks, which nearly encircles the whole island; but the soil is fertile, and sufficiently adapted for all the common crops, and also for rearing and feeding cattle, which is carried on to a great extent. The produce of the orchard is cultivated, and a great quantity of cider is made annually. Pears, peaches, apricots, melons, and strawberries are also grown, and are of excellent quality. Potatoes arrive at perfection very early in the year, and are exported to England. Owing to the mildness of its climate it is much frequented by visitors from London and the south of England. The inhabitants, though subject to England, still speak the French language. They live almost entirely by the produce of the soil, or by what they receive in exchange for it, and are almost entirely engaged in agriculture and commerce. The island is protected by fortifications and defensive works. The island is under the superintendence of a governor and high bailiff, appointed by the crown; and the legislative body called the States of Jersey, without whose approval no law made in England is binding, consists of three functionaries: a high sheriff and two under sheriffs; the twelve judges of the royal court chosen for life by the ratepayers; twelve constables, one for each parish, elected by the inhabitants every three years, and the rectors of the parishes under the dean of Jersey, who is also rector of one of them, and is the head of the ecclesiastical body in the island, subject to the bishop of Winchester. The livings are in the gift of the governor. The governor sits in the assembly, but does not vote, and only speaks on matters connected with the interests of the crown. St Helier is the capital. The French have made several unsuccessful attempts to take the island. Area, 28,717 acres. Pop R. S. Pop. 7389

KENT, a maritime county, forming the south-eastern angle of England, and approaching nearer to the Continent than any other part of the kingdom. It is bounded north by the Thames, which divides it from Essex; east and south-east by the German Ocean and the Straits of Dover; south by the county of Sussex, and west by that of Surrey. The county is beautiful, from the extreme diversity of its surface, and the richness and variety of its scenery, which is uncommonly fine in many places, particularly in the neighbourhood of Maidstone, Tunbridge, and Sittingbourne. The Upper and the Lower hills traverse the whole county from west to east. The former is of chalk, and in some parts is nearly 700 feet high. The Lower hills, or southern range, are chiefly of ironstone and ragstone In the south-east corner of the county are the meadows of Romney Marsh, affording pasture to large flocks of sheep; the Romney Marsh sheep being very valuable, producing a large fleece of fine long wool, and fattening at an early age. It is a large tract of low land, terminating to the south-east in the promontory of Dungeness, and skirted to the north and west by the Military Canal; a defensive work formed in the commencement of the present century, which extends from Hythe to Rye in Sussex. The principal rivers after the Thames, are the Medway, the Stour, the Darent, and the Rother. In Kent every department of agriculture is carried on with great success. About one-fourth of the hops grown every year in England is raised in Kent. A large number of the inhabitants are also engaged in market gardening and fruit growing for the London market. The Isle of Thanet is a very fertile district, and in the Isle of Sheppey there are large tracts of marsh and pasture lands. The oyster fisheries of Faversham and Milton, and of the Swale, an arm of the estuary of the Medway, have been long noted; and at St Margaret's Bay, near Dover, large quantities of small but very delicate lobsters are caught. There are a few unimportant minerals found in the district such as chalk, flint, ragstone, one of the best kinds in England for building purposes, and pyrites. The most extensive and important chalk pits are those of Northfleet and Greenhithe, near Gravesend. The various dockyards at Deptford, Woolwich, Chatham, &c., employ numerous hands; and shipbuilding is carried on in the towns that are situated on the coast Kent returns eight members to Parliament. LANCASHIRE, a maritime county, on the north-west coast, stretching along the east coast of the Irish Sea, from the Mersey to Duddon river. It is bounded on the west by the Irish Sea, east by Yorkshire, south by Cheshire, and north by Westmoreland and Cumberland. In the time of Edward III. it was made a county palatine, in favour of his son John of Gaunt, who was created duke of Lancaster; but in the reign of Edward IV. the duchy was re-annexed to the crown. The chancery court, however, of the duchy of Lancaster still exists, and a chancellor and other officers are duly appointed whenever a change of ministry takes place. The county is level along the sea-coast on the west, but rugged and mountainous in the north and east, where the long ridge called the "backbone of England" separates it from Yorkshire. In the north, Coniston Fell is the highest summit, and rises to nearly 2600 feet above the level of the sea. The principal rivers are the Mersey, the Ribble, the Wyre, the Duddon, and the Irwell. There are several lakes, of which Windermere, Coniston, and Esthwaite are the chief. All the rivers forms large estuaries as they fall into the sea; which are, in general, much encumbered with sandbanks. Those, however, which are not naturally navigable have been rendered so; and such an extensive system of inland navigation has been formed that all parts of the county are brought into communication with each other by means of canal. The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1893, cost upwards of £15,000,000. Oats form the principal corn crop, the soil and climate being peculiarly favourable to the growth of this grain. Barley, wheat, peas, and beans are also grown. It has been long famous for its potatoes, and a variety of other vegetables are also raised, especially in the neighbourhood of the large towns. Extensive coalfields are found in the southern and central portions of the county. Limestone, freestone, whinstones, slates, and flags also abound. Iron ore is plentiful in Furness district, and copper ore is found there as well, but not in great abundance. Lancashire is the chief seat of the cotton manufacture in England; silk, woollen, and linen goods; hats, stockings, nails, watch-tools and movements, earthenware, porcelain, paper, and other articles are also manufactured. The cotton manufacture calls a variety of other employments into operation that happen to be in connection with it, and indirectly gives support to a great number of bleachers, dyers, printers' tool-makers, and engine and machine-makers. There are in the county large works for smelting iron and copper, for blowing bottles and common glass, and casting plate-glass; also chemical works. Lancashire returns twenty-three members to Parliament. Area, 1,219,221 acres. Pop. 3,957,964

LANCASTER, Lanc., a municipal borough, a manufacturing, and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Nearly the whole town is built of excellent freestone, procured from quarries in the district. The ancient castle has been converted into a county gaol and court-house, and is still admired for its extent and the peculiar character of its architecture. The apartments are very large, and the walls of amazing thickness. The town also possesses a shire hall and county courts. The parish church, a spacious Gothic structure, dedicated to St Mary, and there are several other churches, chapels-of-ease, and chapels for Nonconformists, a town-hall, custom house, assembly rooms, theatre, mechanics' institute, a grammar school, and many other educational establishments, public baths and washhouses, an asylum for idiots, the Ripley Hospital, and other charitable institutions. The county lunatic asylum stands on Lancaster Moor, about a mile and a half from the town The Lancaster Canal passes close to the town, about a mile north-east from which is the great aqueduct bridge, by which the canal is carried over the Lune. The suburb of Skerton is connected with the town by a handsome stone bridge of five arches. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 31,038

LEEDS, Yorks., an opulent city, a municipal, parliamentary, and county borough, a manufacturing and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It stands on the Aire, across which it communicates with its suburbs, Holbeck and Hunslet, by bridges. St Peter's, the parish church, was rebuilt in 1840, at the cost of £30,000, from designs furnished by Mr Chantrell. There are many other handsome churches, also a great number of chapels for Nonconformists, and several charitable institutions for the sick and infirm. Other public buildings worthy of notice are the royal exchange, the stock exchange, the county court, the town-hall, a handsome and imposing building, with one of the largest organs in the world, and having colossal statues of Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort in the vestibule, and a fine equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington in front of it; municipal buildings, comprising reading room, free library, and fine art gallery; the corn exchange, market, cavalry barracks, with a large parade ground; a music hall, theatre, and public baths. The town also contains a great many schools, the principal of which is the Yorkshire College, now affiliated with the Victoria University, and the Wesleyan Training College. The industrial school at Burmantofts is also an important educational establishment. In addition to these, there is the library founded by Dr Priestley in 1768, the Leeds Literary and Philosophical Society, a school of design, a museum, and a flourishing mechanics' institute. The chief charitable institutions and hospitals are the General Infirmary, designed by Sir G. G. Scott, and erected at a cost of £120,000, the lying-in hospital, the dispensary, and hospitals for persons suffering from diseases of the eye and ear. There are, besides, various and rich charitable endowments. It is here that all the great sales of woollen cloths take place. The Mixed-Cloth Hall was erected in 1758, at the expense of the manufacturers, to remedy the evil of exposing the goods in the street, as had formerly been the practice. It is a quadrangular building, enclosing an open area. It is thoroughly lighted, and the colours of the goods can be seen as distinctly as in the open air. The White or Undyed Cloth Hall is upon the same plan with the others. It was built on the site of the old infirmary in 1868. The markets for mixed and white cloths are held on Tuesdays and Saturdays. The staple manufacture is woollen cloth and clothing in all its branches, it has also iron industries, tanneries, chemical works, &c. Leeds returns five members to Parliament. Pop. 367,505

It contains a number of churches, the oldest of which is St Nicholas'; also many chapels for Nonconformists, an ancient town-hall, extensive municipal buildings, the post office, high schools for boys and girls, a Government prison, infirmary, a lunatic asylum, market, corn exchange, free libraries, municipal technical school and school of art, temperance hall, assembly rooms, opera house, theatre, museum, and public baths. There are also many charitable institutions, including Trinity and Wigston hospitals. It has recreation grounds and public parks. Leicester returns two members to Parliament. It manufactures hosiery, boots and shoes, clothing, elastic webbing, and cigars, and also has important mechanical trades. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 174,624

LEICESTERSHIRE, is bounded on the north by the counties of Derby and Nottingham, south by Warwick and Northampton, east by Lincoln and Rutland, and west by Warwick and Derby; and between these, for a short distance, also by Staffordshire. The surface is undulating, being almost entirely covered with ranges of low hills. The soil is for the most part loamy and admirably adapted for grazing lands and dairy farms. The principal rivers are the Soar, a tributary of the Trent; the Wreak, the Anker, the Tame, the Mease, and the Devon. In addition to these, the county is intersected by numerous canals. More than half the land is kept for pasture; and there are many large dairies. The famous Stilton cheese is made near Melton Mowbray, and the county is noted for a useful and beautiful breed of black horses.

The sheep are also of a superior breed. Along the banks of the rivers, especially those of the Soar, the natural meadows are rich and extensive. The minerals found are coal and lime. In some parts the limestone affords a rich lead ore. Ironstone is found in abundance on the Ashby Wolds, as well as large quantities of slate, freestone, and clay for bricks. The manufactures are chiefly hosiery, and boots and shoes, with that of silk plush, fire bricks, and agricultural implements. Leicestershire returns four members to Parliament. Area, 514,104 acres

LICHFIELD, Stafs., an Episcopal city, municipal borough, and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is neat and well built, and is the seat of a bishopric. The cathedral is supposed to have been founded in 667. It has been repaired and improved since 1860, and is one of the noblest ecclesiastical edifices in the kingdom. A spire, beautifully ornamented with carved stonework, rises from the centre of the building, to the height of 258 feet, two smaller ones being placed at the west end. The interior is finished with corresponding elegance and splendour. Over the great west doors that open into the nave is paced a beautiful circular window, constructed at the expense of James, duke of York, in the reign of Charles II. It has also numerous interesting monuments, including one to the memory of Dr Johnson, who was a native of Lichfield. St Mary's Chapel is also very rich and beautiful. The library belonging to the cathedral contains some ancient and valuable literature. The bishop's palace is situated at the north-east corner of the cathedral, while the deanery stands west from the palace. The town contains several other churches, and numerous chapels for Nonconformists. The other public buildings are the market house, the guildhall, a theatre, the market, the museum and library, the theological college, two hospitals, concert hall, and a free grammar school, at which Addison, Ashmole, Garrick, and Johnson were educated. There are, besides, several other charitable institutions. Market day, Friday. Pop. 7596

LINCOLN, Linc., an Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and county and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is a city of great antiquity, but it has lost much of its former splendour. Of the public buildings, the principal is the cathedral, or minster, a fine specimen of Norman and Early English architecture. It has three high and richly decorated towers, which were formerly surmounted with spires. The grand western front is especially distinguished for the beauty and magnificence of its architecture. The building has been thoroughly repaired and restored. Besides the cathedral, there are a number of parish churches, and several chapels for Nonconformists. Among the other places of interest are the castle, the county and city gaols, the county hospital, the free grammar school, the diocesan school and other educational establishments, an assembly room, a theatre, lunatic asylum, market house, several libraries, and a mechanics' institute. A corn exchange,, with a spacious hall for public meetings, a cattle market, and a vegetable market. There is also a general market near the corn exchange. Few places in the kingdom afford so many remains of antiquity as Lincoln. The most remarkable are Exchequer Gate, in the cathedral close, and the remains of buildings called John of Gaunt's palace and stables. There is also an old gateway of handsome appearance in the High Street. Has iron foundries, and also manufactures agricultural machinery. Its horse fair is one of the largest in the world. Lincoln returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Friday. Pop. 41,401

LINCOLNSHIRE, a maritime county, bounded on the east by the German Ocean; north by the river Humber, which divides it from Yorkshire; west by the counties of York, Nottingham, and Leicester; and south by the counties of Rutland, Northampton, and Cambridge. It is celebrated for the number and beauty of its churches. Although the entire surface of Lincolnshire is flat and low, and presents but little diversity of appearance, it is divided by nature into three parts. The Wolds are chalk downs, which commence near Spilsby, and extend, in a north-westerly direction, to Barton-on-the-Humber. They are, on an average, nearly 8 miles in breadth, and besides the ordinary live stock, a great number of rabbits are reared. The Heaths, north and south of Lincoln, extend from the Humber to Grantham, and are, for the most part, enclosed and cultivated, and produce all the ordinary crops. Along the foot of the Wolds is a low land, which forms a district called the Marsh, a long and rather narrow strip, extending from Wainfleet, on the Wash, to the Humber. To the south of this is the district of the Fens, which forms the northern termination of the great fenny district, which extends so widely over the counties of Norfolk, Cambridge, Bedford, and Huntingdon. The principal rivers are the Trent, Welland, Witham, Glen, and Ancholme. The county is also intersected by various canals. The Fens form one of the richest tracts in the kingdom. They afford excellent pasture lands, on which large numbers of sheep and cattle are reared. All the ordinary crops are grown in this part of the county with advantage, especially, oats, which are raised in great quantities. In many parts of the Fens which have not yet been brought into cultivation thousands of geese are reared, partly for the sake of their quills and feathers, and partly to supply the London market. Immense numbers of wild fowl are also caught in these fens by decoys. The soil of the Heaths is in general a good sandy loam upon a bed of limestone. The number of sheep in the county is very great, and it has long been famous for its breed of horses. Lincolnshire returns seven members to Parliament. Area, 1,775,457. Pop. 467,184

LIVERPOOL, Lanc., an Episcopal city, a principal seaport, a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, situated on the Mersey, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Its commodious harbour is of the first-class, and stretches about 6½ miles along the river, and comprises upwards of fifty docks and basins, with a total water area of about 380 acres, and nearly 25 miles of quayage, and having immense warehouses for the accommodation of merchandise. The opening of the Manchester Ship Canal in 1894 had no appreciable effect on the trade of the port. The town is of great antiquity, but was of comparatively little importance till the beginning of the 19th century. Since then it has rapidly advanced to opulence and magnitude; no less than £300,000,000 having been spent on town improvements. It is well built, the streets are spacious and airy, while some of them present a handsome and imposing appearance. The suburbs abound with villas and mansions, belonging to the principal merchants of Liverpool and other wealthy families, which are built in a style of elegance and splendour which alike betokens and befits the taste and opulence of their owners. The public buildings are numerous, and generally remarkable for their great size and architectural beauty. Of these, the town-hall and municipal buildings in Dale Street, and the adjacent exchange, are the principal. The latter building comprises newsrooms, underwriters' rooms, cotton sales' rooms, merchants' offices, and the apartments appropriated to the Liverpool and American chambers of commerce. Near the town-hall is a bronze statue to Lord Nelson. There are also monuments to Queen Victoria, the late Prince Consort, Lord Beaconsfield, and the Duke of Wellington near St George's Hall. Among other public buildings of importance are the corn exchange, the Lyceum and Athenæum, the custom house, court house, and the new post office. Free libraries and museum, Picton reading room, Walker art gallery, the Sailors' Home, the royal and mechanics' institutions, and the borough gaol. St George's Hall is in Lime Street. It is a handsome structure, built after the Corinthian order of architecture, and containing the assize courts, a concert room, and a hall for public meetings. Liverpool contains about 100 churches, of which St Nicholas' is the oldest. There are also about 150 places of worship for Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and Nonconformists. The charitable institutions are also numerous and well conducted. Among these may be noticed the dispensaries for supplying medicines to the sick poor, a hospital for decayed seamen and their widows and children, a fever hospital, a ladies' charity, for the relief of poor married women in childbed; a penitentiary for unfortunate women, the Southern Hospital, the Stanley Hospital, the Northern Hospital, the Strangers' Friend Society, an ophthalmic hospital, a lunatic asylum, and many others. There are several institutions established for the encouragement of literary and scientific pursuits, the chief of which is the Royal Institution, where public lectures are given, and in connection with which a botanic garden was also established in 1801, at an expense of about £10,000. The University College is affiliated with the Victoria University; other institutions are the Liverpool College, Queen's College, Medical Institute, Liverpool Institute, and Royal Institution. There are several large covered market houses for the sale of provisions of all kinds, meat, vegetables, poultry, and fish, the chief of which is St John's Market. There are theatres and music halls, concert rooms, and similar places of amusement in various parts of the town, and on the land side are numerous parks, of which the principal are Stanley Park and Sefton Park. The trade of Liverpool is most extensive; and it is to this, rather than to manufactures, that it owes its importance. It has, however, sugar refineries, breweries, rope walks, glass works, brass and iron foundries, soda works, and manufactures of watches and jewellery. Shipbuilding is carried on to a considerable extent. The trade of Liverpool to all parts of the globe is very great, and has been largely extended by the construction and arrangement of the docks. Nearly all the raw cotton imported into Great Britain is brought into it; and from it an immense number of emigrants start every year for Canada, the United States, and all parts of the world. Markets daily. Pop. 631,384, but including Bootle, Garston, Birkenhead, and other suburbs, about 900,000. Liverpool returns nine members to Parliament.

LONDON, the famous capital of England, and the metropolis and seat of government of the British empire, the supreme seat of the judicature of the country, and its financial and commercial centre, and the place of residence of the wealthier classes from all parts of the kingdom. It extends to about 122 square miles, of which about three-fourths are in Middlesex, the remainder mostly in Surrey, with portions in Essex and Kent. It measures about 14 miles from east to west, and 10 miles from north to south, includes the cities of London and Westminster on the north bank of the Thames, and the ancient boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark on the south bank of the river. To each of these principal divisions of London many neighbouring towns and villages have been successively annexed. The opposite banks are connected by numerous bridges. Besides these, the Thames is crossed by several railway bridges, and throughout London are innumerable railway stations. London was constituted the capital of England by Alfred the Great, who may be regarded as the founder of our merchant navy, he having built several large vessels, which he lent to the merchants, at the same time assisting them with money. In 925 King Athelstan had a palace in it, and, during successive reigns, the dimensions of the city were gradually extended. William the Conqueror recognised the ancient rights of London in a special charter (still preserved), confirming the privileges enjoyed by the citizens under Edward the Confessor. William Rufus, in 1097, built Westminster Hall. Henry I. in 1101 made London an important grant by the annexation of the county of Middlesex to its jurisdiction; and held a council of state at Westminster in 1116. This meeting of the nobility is by some reckoned the first Parliament. Richard I. changed the designation of the chief magistrate from Portreeve to Mayor in 1190. Henry III. in 1221 laid the first stone of the Abbey Church of Westminster, which remains a monument of the taste and architecture of the age In 1279 Edward I. massacred 280 Jews, and seized their property, and expelled 19,000 Jews in 1289. In 1285 a conduit in Cheapside was supplied with water brought from Tyburn by leaden pipes, and 1340 tolls were imposed for paving the streets in and near the city. In 1354 the title of Lord Mayor was conferred by Edward III. The streets were first lighted with lanterns in 1415; and, in 1443, the supply of water being found insufficient, pipes were laid from Paddington. A statute was passed in 1533 for paving some of the streets; and it appears that the Strand was then only partly built. The Royal Exchange was opened in 1556. The increase of London now became so rapid that Queen Elizabeth and King James each issued proclamations against any farther extension of the city. The new river water was brought into the city in 1620 at a cost of £500,000, and a subsequent expenditure of £1,000,000. About 1661 a great many streets in St James's parish were built and finished, particularly St James's Street, Pall Mall, and Piccadilly; and other streets were ordered to be widened. In 1665 London was almost depopulated by the great plague, nearly 70,000 of the inhabitants falling victims to this disorder; and, in the following year, a dreadful conflagration broke out, and destroyed 13,000 houses, and most of the churches and corporation halls, the ruins covering an area of 436 acres, extending along the river from London Bridge to Temple Bar. In rebuilding the city many important improvements were effected, the streets being widened and the houses being constructed of more substantial materials. In 1685 the population of Spitalfields and St Giles's was much increased by an immigration of French Protestant manufacturers, who left their native country in consequence of the revocation of the edict of Nantes. In 1689 the district called the Seven Dials was built, and the suburbs to the east of the Tower were also greatly extended. Soho Square was built at the close of the 17th century, and, in a few years afterwards, Hanover Square, Cavendish Square, and the streets adjacent, as well as Bedford Row, Red Lion Square, Hatton Garden, and several other streets and squares, were finished. The streets from Leicester Square to St Martin's Lane North and to the Haymarket and Soho West, and thence nearly to Knightsbridge, were added in the reign of George I., or early in that of George II. In 1730 two new parishes were formed—St George, Bloomsbury, and St Anne, Limehouse; and, about the same time, the north side of Oxford Street was partly built, and many streets near it were completed. The extension of the metropolis since the middle of the last century has proceeded with unprecedented rapidity, covering the fields, gardens, and marshes in the vicinity with new squares and streets. The direction of the main streets are parallel to the course of the river Thames, or very nearly so, from west to east; and the cross streets run, for the most part, in a transverse direction from north to south. There are two chief lines of streets from west to east; one, which may be called the northern line, commences at the north side of Hyde Park, and, under the successive names of Oxford Street, St Giles's, Holborn, the Holborn Viaduct, Newgate Street, Cheapside, Cornhill, and Leadenhall Street, is continued to Whitechapel and Mile End, on the Essex Road. The southern line commences at the south side of Hyde Park, and consists of Piccadilly, St James's Street, Pall Mall, Charing Cross, the Strand, Fleet Street, Ludgate Hill, St Paul's Churchyard, Cannon Street, and Tower Street; whence, crossing Tower Hill, it may be said to be further extended two miles along the river side, in Wapping. One of the great features of London are its numerous parks. The principal are:—Hyde Park, which is the largest and most fashionable; St James's Park; the Green Park; Regent's Park, in the north; here are the Zoological and Botanic Gardens; Victoria Park, in the east; and Battersea Park and Kennington Park, in the south; also Kensington Gardens, with which Hyde Park communicates at several points, may be mentioned. The subterranean works which have been constructed for the accommodation of the inhabitants of London, consisting of sewers, drains, and pipes for the conveyance of gas and water and electricity are most extensive and curious. The main system of sewers, consists of miles of brickwork, and has an outlet into the Thames between Barking and Erith. There is also the underground railway. The houses are chiefly built of brick; the principal squares are Belgrave, Eaton, Grosvenor, Portman, St James's, Hanover, Cavendish, Bedford, Russell, Bloomsbury, Tavistock, Euston, Brunswick, and Finsbury, and Lincoln's Inn Fields. The principal public structures in the metropolis in the city and east of it are the Tower, the Mint, the Trinity House, the Bank of England, the Mansion House, the Royal Exchange, the Custom House, the Excise Office, and the Guildhall. The bridges of Tower, London, Southwark, and Blackfriars; the Monument, General Post Office, St Luke's Hospital, St Paul's Cathedral, the churches of St Stephen, Walbrook, St Mary-le-Bow, St Bride, Fleet Street, and the Temple Church. The markets are numerous; comprising Covent Garden and Farringdon, for fruit and vegetables; Billingsgate, for fish; the Meat Market at Smithfield and Leadenhall Market for the sale of meat of all kinds and poultry. The cattle market occupies the site which once was called Copenhagen Fields. The White Tower was erected by William the Conqueror for the purpose of intimidating the citizens, and the other buildings and fortifications have been added to it at different periods. The whole is surrounded by a moat. The Tower was inhabited as a palace by several English sovereigns, until the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Since her death it has been chiefly used as a state prison and depository for arms, records, jewels, and property belonging to the crown. The arms and ancient armour have been excellently arranged, and form an interesting and instructive exhibition intimately connected with the history of our country. The Trinity House, an association which has the control of all lighthouses and buoys on the coast, and which may be considered as the head of the mercantile navy of Great Britain, is a very handsome building on the north side of Great Tower Hill. The Bethnal Green Museum and the People's Palace are recent additions to the interesting buildings of the East End. A noble pillar, 202 feet high, called the London Monument, stands on the east side of Fish Street Hill. It was erected by Sir Christopher Wren, to commemorate the great fire of 1666. The cathedral church of St Paul is placed in the first rank among modern works of architecture in the British empire. The first stone was laid in June, 1675, and the last in 1710; the work being completed in 35 years, by one architect, Sir Christopher Wren. The plan is a Latin cross, with an additional arm or transept at the west end, and a semicircular projection at the east end, for the altar. A dome rises from the intersection of the nave and transept, and is terminated by a lantern, surmounted by a ball and a cross, of copper gilt. This vast fabric is 510 feet long, 250 broad, and, with the dome, 370 feet high. The entire ascent to the ball is made by 616 steps. The cathedral contains monuments erected to the memory of many eminent persons deceased, and cost £747,974. Besides St Paul's, London comprises a vast number of churches, with towers and spires in almost every style of architecture. The inns of court are the Inner and Middle Temple, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn. Each of these is composed of several large houses, which are built round quadrangular areas, and are divided into numerous sets of chambers, inhabited or used as offices by barristers, students, attorneys, and solicitors. The principal buildings west of the city, exclusive of Buckingham and St James's palaces and houses of the nobility, are Westminster Abbey, Westminster Hall, the Law Courts in the Strand, the Record Office between Chancery Lane and Fetter Lane, the House of Lords and House of Commons, otherwise known as the New Palace of Westminster; the Horse Guards, the War Office, the Admiralty, the Treasury, the offices of the secretaries of state in Downing Street and neighbourhood; Somerset House, a grand and extensive stone building in the Strand, appropriated to various public uses and offices. The Victoria Embankment, completed in 1870 at a cost of £2,000,000, forms a magnificent promenade along the Thames from Westminster to Blackfriars Bridge. The British Museum, in Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, is a noble building, with a magnificent reading room, opened in 1857, for the benefit of those engaged in literary pursuits. The South Kensington Museum; the National Gallery, Trafalgar Square, and Burlington House, the headquarters of the Royal Academy, and many learned societies. The most remarkable churches in this direction are those of St George, Hanover Square and St Marylebone. Southwark contains Guy's Hospital, the Magdalene

Hospital in Blackfriars Road, the Roman Catholic cathedral dedicated to St George, and the new Bethlehem Hospital for lunatics, erected in St George's Fields. The bridges which unite the divisions of the metropolis built on the opposite banks of the Thames have already been named. London Bridge, till the middle of the 18th century, was the only bridge which connected the Middlesex and Surrey banks; Westminster, one of the finest bridges in the country, was opened in 1860; Blackfriars has been replaced by a new structure of stone and iron, opened in 1869. The Tower Bridge, opened in 1894 at a cost of £830,000, is on the "bascule" principal, with Gothic towers, the centre span of 200 feet, being cut in two halves, to be raised by machinery, and brought flush with the towers; an upper footway for passengers, 140 feet above water, is approached by stairs and lifts within the towers, each leaf of the opening span weighs 950 tons. Waterloo Bridge was begun in the year 1811 and opened in 1817, on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. It consists of nine equal arches, each of 120 feet span; the piers are 20 feet thick, and adorned with Tuscan columns; the width within the parapets is 42 feet. It cost upwards of £1,000 000, which was raised by a subscription. Chelsea Bridge was opened in 1858, to unite the Battersea side of the river with the Chelsea side. Two miles below London Bridge is the Thames Tunnel, which was commenced in 1825, by Sir Isambard Brunel as the engineer, and opened in 1846. The public charities of London (exclusive of parochial establishments) are numerous, and apply to every case of infirmity or distress. Among these may be named St Bartholomew's, St Thomas's, and Christ's Hospitals. St Bartholomew's, in Smithfield, and St Thomas's on the banks of the Thames opposite the Houses of Parliament, are appropriated to the relief of the diseased; and Christ's Hospital to the maintenance and education of boys who may be selected and presented by the governors. The other hospitals are Bethlehem for lunatics; the Charter House, which is an asylum for decayed householders, with a free school attached to it; Guy's, built by Thomas Guy, bookseller, in 1701, and endowed by him at his death with £240,000; St Luke's; the Foundling Hospital, in Guildford Street; St George's Hospital, near Hyde Park Corner; the London Hospital, Whitechapel; the Middlesex Hospital, Berners Street; the Westminster Hospital, and several others; with numerous dispensaries, establishments, and houses for the benefit of the poor and the afflicted, as well as the unfortunate. There is no city in the world where charity of every description is dispensed with such a liberal hand as in London The lord mayor, aldermen, and common council, form the court of common council, which constitutes the legislature of the city, and by which all laws are framed which are necessary for its internal government The lord mayor is the chief magistrate in the city, and the aldermen are justices of the peace for life for the city, and the chief magistrates in their respective wards The other principal executive officers of this corporation are the recorder, common serjeant, town clerk, and two sheriffs. There are now upwards of 200 common councillors. Since 1837 London has been the seat of a university, with which many colleges throughout the country are connected, and its buildings are in Piccadilly. The literary and scientific institutions are numerous; among these may be mentioned the Royal Society, incorporated in 1662, under the presidency of Sir Isaac Newton; the Royal Geographical Society, the Society of Antiquaries, the Board of Agriculture, the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce; the Royal Institution; the London, Surrey, and Russell Institutions; the Linnæan Society, devoted to botany and natural history; the Philosophical Society of London, the British Mineralogical Society, the Entomological, Horticultural, Geological, Mathematical, Medical, Medical and Chirurgical, and City Philosophical Societies. The South Kensington Museum, in Cromwell Road, Brompton, was opened in 1857. It contains works of art, specimens of animals, and vegetable and mineral productions, a collection of educational apparatus, and pictures. Near this building, in Hyde Park, is a magnificent structure to the memory of Prince Albert. The Imperial Institute, erected to commemorate the jubilee of the reign of Queen Victoria is also in the vicinity. The British Museum is the grand national depository of antiquities, sculpture, natural and artificial curiosities, scientific collections, manuscripts, and printed books. It was established by Act of Parliament, in 1753, in consequence of the will of Sir Hans Sloane. Several institutions have been established for promoting the fine arts—namely, the Royal Academy, instituted in 1768. An annual exhibition of paintings is made at the Royal Academy. The National Gallery is in Trafalgar Square, where are also fountains, which frequently play; monuments to the memory of Nelson, Havelock, and other illustrious men; and four splendidly-modelled lions in bronze, by Sir Edwin Landseer, on pedestals jutting out from the base of Nelson's column. For operatic and musical performances there are theatres and numerous music halls scattered throughout the metropolis. Every kind of entertainment is provided for the pleasure-seeking citizen. Newgate is the gaol of London and Middlesex, and is situated in the Old Bailey. There are, besides, various other prisons. At a very early period London became the seat of an extensive trade. From London Bridge the Thames for several miles is occupied by her shipping. To provide further accommodation several docks have been constructed, the chief of which are the St Katherine's Docks, the London Docks, the West India, East India, and Victoria Docks, all of which are on the north bank of the river, between the Tower and North Woolwich, and the Commercial Docks on the south side of the river, opposite the West India Docks. The last-named docks were opened in 1802. They are formed across the narrowest part of the Isle of Dogs, and comprise two basins—one of 30 acres, for unloading the ships arrived from the West Indies, and the other of 24 acres, for loading outward-bound ships. The London Docks were opened in 1805, and are used for the general trade of the port. The East India Docks are situated at Blackwall; the loading dock is 780 feet long and 520 wide, and the discharging dock consists of 18½ acres. The Victoria Docks are situated to the east of Blackwall, and has an area of about 200 acres. The Royal Albert Dock, which is below Woolwich Reach, has an area of about 430 acres. Tilbury Docks, a little above Gravesend, were opened in 1886, and are among the finest in the world. Thirty-two steam vessels of the largest size can be accommodated for loading or discharging cargo, and the tidal basin enables the largest to leave or enter irrespective of tidal conditions. About 14,000,000 tons of shipping enter the port annually. The manufactures are of every kind, but consist chiefly of silk fabrics, cutlery, jewellery, watches, japan-ware, cut glass, books, cabinetwork, carriages, and other fine goods and articles of superior description. The southern bank of the Thames is lined with manufactories, such as iron foundries, dye houses, soap and oil manufactories, glass works, distilleries, tanyards, and hat manufactories; and in many other parts there are breweries, shipbuilders' yards, oilcloth and paper manufactories, vinegar works, and chemical manufactories on a large scale. Its population increased from 747,043 in 1801 to 4,211,056 in 1891. London returns 62 members to Parliament, and one member for the University besides

MAN, ISLE OF, is situated in the centre of the Irish Sea, and has an area of 145,325 acres. On account of its equable climate it has been styled the Madeira of the British Isles. Its scenery is justly celebrated for its loveliness and picturesque variety; and it presents exceptional attractions for the holiday-maker and the angler, as well as the student of history, and the readers of romance in Scott and Hall Caine. The unique position of the island makes it the favourite holiday ground of the three kingdoms. The busy workers in the great manufacturing districts of England early discovered its attractions, but during recent years it has made rapid strides in popularity among all classes of the community. It is in a large measure due to the excellence of its hotels, and the comforts of its boarding-houses. These form quite a special feature of the island, and the charges are extremely moderate. Much is also due to the excellent service of steamers from all the leading ports, those on the Liverpool route being the largest and swiftest passenger steamers afloat. Visitors here find no lack of recreation; it has ample bathing facilities, and fishing, yachting, and boating can be had along the coast. The chief town is Douglas (q.v.) There are convenient railways to all parts of the island, and all postal facilities. The earls of Derby were formerly kings of Man, they were succeeded in the sovereignty by the dukes of Athole, from whom it was acquired by the English government in 1765. All legislative power in the Isle of Man is vested in the Court of Tynwald, consisting of the governor and council, the latter comprising the bishop, two deemsters, the attorney-general, clerk of the rolls, water bailiff, archdeacon, and vicar-general, and the House of Keys, a body of twenty-four representatives elected by the people, who possess household suffrage in towns, £4 owner and £6 tenant franchise in the country, which is also enjoyed by women. The whole island is under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of a bishop, who is styled bishop of Sodor and Man, and is, besides, sole baron of the isle, and possesses other important privileges. The bishop sits in the House of Lords, but does not vote. On the south is a small island called the Calf of Man. Pop. 55,608

MANCHESTER, Lanc., an Episcopal city, municipal, parliamentary, and county borough, and market town, converted into a seaport in 1893 by the opening of the Ship Canal, chief seat and centre of the cotton manufacture in England. It is situated on the Irwell, which separates it from the neighbouring borough of Salford. The greater part of the town lies on the left or east bank of the river; but Salford is built entirely on the west bank, and is joined to the opposite side by several bridges. The town has been much improved and extended in late years. The central parts consist of a great number of spacious streets, lanes, alleys, and courts, all crowded with warehouses, factories, and shops. The churches and chapels are numerous. When Manchester was made the seat of a bishopric, the Collegiate Church, usually called the Old Church, a fine Gothic structure, richly ornamented both externally and internally, was erected into the cathedral church of the diocese. It has a tower 139 feet high, with a peal of ten bells. Its entire breadth is 120 feet from north to south; and the whole length from east to west is 216 feet. Some of the other churches deserve notice; as St George's, in Hulme; St Luke's, in Cheetham; and Trinity Church at Salford. There is a Roman Catholic cathedral in Salford. The chapels for Roman Catholics and Nonconformists number about 150, with five synagogues, a place of worship for members of the Greek Church, and an Armenian Church. No town is more distinguished by the number of its charitable institutions. Cheetham Hospital is intended for the maintenance and education of eighty boys, from the age of six to fourteen, and has a large library and museum attached to it. In addition to this, there is the Manchester Free Grammar School, founded in 1515; the Lancashire Independent College, in connection with the University of London; Manchester New College, and the Albert Memorial Hall, belonging to the Unitarians; Owens College (nucleus of the Victoria University, chartered in 1880) was founded in 1851 from a bequest of £100,000, made by John Owens, a city merchant. The Technical School is of the first class. The infirmary is a handsome set of buildings, opposite Piccadilly: it includes a large general hospital, a dispensary, and a lunatic asylum and hospital. There are, besides a lying-in hospital, the Ladies' Auxiliary Society, the House of Recovery, or fever ward, the Strangers' Friend Society, instituted in 1791; an hospital for persons afflicted with diseases of the eye; also the Royal, Salford, and Lock Hospitals. Of the associations for promoting literature and science, the principal are the Literary and Philosophical Society, founded in 1781; the Royal Institution; Geological, Statistical, Architectural, Phrenological, Botanical, and Natural History Societies, besides several mechanics' institutes and literary societies. Among libraries in Manchester which have been established for the benefit of the working classes, the Manchester Free Library in King Street and the Salford Free Library in Peel Park are the most important; but branches are to be found in most of the suburbs. The Exchange, for the resort of the merchants and tradesmen, is a very fine and spacious building, built in the Doric style. On the ground floor is a magnificent hall, 185 feet long and 92 feet broad, comprising an area of 17,020 square feet, with rooms above for public dinners, meetings, &c., on a corresponding scale. The other buildings of importance are the Corn Exchange, the Free Trade Hall in Peter Street, the Manchester Assize Courts, completed in 1864; the new town-hall in Albert Square, cost £1,053,000, and has a tower 286 feet high, containing a peal of 21 bells; the Royal Exchange, the Commercial Buildings, in which is a convenient Stock Exchange, markets for meat, vegetables, and general purposes, and several theatres, concert hall, assembly rooms. Salford and Chorlton town-halls, the New Bailey Prison in Salford, founded in 1787; the borough gaol in the Gorton Road; various asylums for the blind and deaf and dumb, and the barracks. Manchester contains several public parks, the principal being the Queen's Park at Harpurhey, Alexandra Park at Moss-side, Phillip's Park at Bradford, and Peel's Park in Salford. There are also three cemeteries—one in the Rusholme Road, another at Harpurhey, and a third at Ardwick. The principal monuments are the Prince Consort memorial in Albert Square, and the statues of Cobden, the duke of Wellington, John Bright, Cromwell, Sir Robert Peel, Bishop Fraser, Dalton, Watts, &c. It is the birthplace of the celebrated duke of Bridgewater, Henry Dalton, and the father of the great Sir Robert Peel. During the years 1862 and 1863 the operatives of Manchester, in common with others engaged in the cotton trade suffered from the check given to the cotton manufacture by the war in America. It is as a manufacturing city that Manchester derives its importance. Of its manufactures, the principal, and the source of most of the rest, is the cotton manufacture. From Manchester as a centre, this trade extends around it in all directions, to Lancaster and Derby on the north and south, and to Leeds and Liverpool on the east and west. It is, besides, the general depot from which the raw material is distributed through all parts of the district, and in which all the merchandise made in the neighbouring towns is again collected when finished, to be sent to Hull, Liverpool, London, &c., and thence all over the world. There are important engineering works, iron foundries, and other works of a similar kind. Besides the weaving and spinning, the printing, dyeing, and bleaching businesses are largely pursued. The hat manufacture is also very extensive, and there are large chemical works, besides a great number of other manufactories. By canals which proceed from Manchester to different parts of the country, it enjoys communication by water both with the eastern and western seas, being situated directly in the line of navigation which extends across this part of England from shore to shore, but the most important of these is the Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1893 at a cost of £15,000,000. It greatly increased the commercial importance of the city; as it is capable of admitting ocean steamers. The canal is 35½ miles in length, and the docks at Manchester have a water surface of 104½ acres, and over 5 miles of quayage. Manchester returns six members to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Pop. 505,368

MIDDLESEX, an inland county, containing the city and most of the county of London, and bounded south by Surrey and part of Kent, north by Hertfordshire. west by Buckinghamshire, and east by Essex. The Thames divides it from Surrey and Kent, the Colne from Buckinghamshire, and the Lea from Essex. It has, for the most part, a gently undulating level surface, with considerable inequalities in some parts, and level tracts of land of considerable extent in others. The ground rises from the banks of the Thames towards the north; and within a few miles of London there is a range of eminences namely, Hampstead, Highgate, Muswell Hill, and others, and a still higher and more extensive ridge runs in a north-east direction from Uxbridge, through Edgeware and Barnet, to the neighbourhood of Enfield Chase. The principal rivers are the Thames, the Lea, and the Colne, which form the boundaries of the county; the Brent is the chief river that runs through the interior of the county. The New River supplies a great part of the metropolis with water. It has also three canals, the Paddington, the Great Junction, and the Regent, which are of great importance in promoting communication between the metropolis and the surrounding district on the north and north-west. The land is laid out in meadow ground and pasturage; but market gardens and nurseries are numerous, and villa residences abound throughout the county. Wheat and barley are the chief corn crops that are raised. Middlesex, exclusive of the city and county of London, returns seven members to Parliament. MONMOUTHSHIRE, a maritime county, on the borders of Wales, bounded south by the Bristol Channel, north by the counties of Hereford and Brecknock, west by Glamorgan, and east by the county of Gloucester and part of Hereford. The Welsh language is much spoken in the agricultural districts, though the English is mostly used in the towns. It comprises every variety of scenery, combining, indeed, the wildness and picturesque beauty of mountain regions with the richness and undulating surface of a highly-cultivated country. The soil is for the most part very fertile and productive, and all the principal crops are usually grown with great success. It also affords good pasture for sheep and cattle. The marsh lands along the coast are many of them subject to inundations of the sea, and great dykes have been raised for their protection, chiefly in the extensive levels of Caldecot and Wentloog. The principal rivers are the Munnow, the Wye, the Usk, and the Ebbw, and a number of smaller streams. The minerals found are ironstone, lead, coal, limestone of the finest kind, breccia for millstones, and valuable building stones. Monmouthshire returns three members to Parliament. Area, 368,399 acres. Pop. 275086

It combines with Welshpool, Newtown, Machynlleth, Llanidloes, and Llanfyllin to form the Montgomery district of boroughs, which returns one member to Parliament. The town is well built, and stands on the slope of a high hill. It has a church, and a town-hall. In this neighbourhood the last battle between the Welsh and English was fought in 1294. It has also the ruins of Montgomery Castle. Market day, Thursday. Pop. 1098

MONTGOMERYSHIRE, a county of North Wales, bounded on the east by Shropshire, west by the counties of Merioneth and Cardigan, south by Radnorshire, and north by Denbigh and part of Merioneth. The county is considerably diversified; but, on the whole, mountainous, though neither so rugged nor so wild as the adjacent county of Merioneth. The valleys among the mountains are fertile, producing abundance of corn and grass, while the uplands afford pasturage for cattle and sheep. The principal rivers are the Severn, the Wye, the Vyrnwy, the Tanat, and the Dovey and its tributary streams. It is also famous for a peculiar breed of small ponies called "merlin," which are highly esteemed. All the ordinary crops are successfully grown. This is the best wooded county in the northern part of the principality. The chief minerals are lead and slate; limestone occurs, but not in great abundance. Woollen goods and flannels are manufactured. Montgomeryshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 483,323 acres. Pop. 67,290

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Northumb., an Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, river-port, market town, and the chief town of the county, situated on the north bank of the river Tyne, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The principal among the public buildings is St Nicholas' Church, now a cathedral, remarkable for its spire, which somewhat resembles an imperial crown in form. Besides this church, there are others, of which the churches of All Saints, St Andrew, St John, St Paul, St Michael, and St Stephen, Christ Church, and the Clayton Memorial Church are the most worthy of notice. There is also a handsome Roman Catholic church dedicated to St Mary, and numerous chapels for Nonconformists. The other public buildings of importance are the Mansion House, the Trinity House, and the Exchange buildings, the town-hall, a corn exchange, a music hall, and various municipal offices, public library, post office, farmers' club-house, &c. The Moot Hall, or assize court, belonging to the county of Northumberland, is built in the style of the Temple of Theseus, at Athens. At the head of Grey Street there is a lofty column supporting a statue of Earl Grey, by Baily. Newcastle is connected with Gateshead by three bridges. The High Level Bridge, from plans by Robert Stephenson and T. E. Harrison; the Swing Bridge, and the Redheugh Suspension Bridge. To the south and to the east of the Exchange is the quay, which is one of the longest and most commodious in the United Kingdom. The Assembly Rooms are both elegant and spacious. In addition to the buildings already mentioned, there are the theatres, a county court house, the Literary and Philosophical Institution, the Government School of Design, and the barracks. Just outside the west gate are the public baths, conveniently fitted up. The market house for meat, poultry, butter, fruit, and vegetables occupies nearly three acres, and is one of the handsomest in the kingdom. It has the ruins of an ancient castle. The chief charitable institutions are the infirmary, the dispensary, a fever hospital, lunatic asylum for the counties of Durham and Northumberland, and many other hospitals, infirmaries, and almshouses and asylums for the deaf and dumb, blind, poor, and aged. Newcastle has two free grammar schools, the Abbot schools, the Stephenson Memorial schools, and a great number of other schools, besides being the seat of a literary and philosophical society, a society of antiquaries, and several other learned institutions. A bronze statue of George Stephenson stands near the Central Railway Station. The town dates from very ancient times, and is now one of the most important seaport, commercial, and manufacturing cities in the kingdom, with a large shipping trade to the Baltic. The present name is derived from the castle, which was built on the site of an old fortress in 1080, and called the New Castle. It is the birthplace of Akenside the poet, Admiral Lord Collingwood, and Lord-Chancellor Eldon. Newcastle is noted for its collieries which principally lie along the Tyne, both above and below the town From this magazine, the vast consumption of London, the whole of the eastern and most of the southern coasts of the islands, and the opposite coasts of France, Holland, and Germany, have been supplied for centuries. It manufactures pottery, glass, chemicals, iron, tin, and every kind of metal goods. Machinery is also made, and there are extensive rope walks, breweries, and distilleries. Shipbuilding and engineering is also carried on to a great extent. Newcastle returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 186,300

NORE, a noted part of the river Thames, situated off Sheerness. It has a floating light, which is moored over a sandbank, 4 miles north-east of Sheerness

NORFOLK, an extensive maritime county on the east coast, bounded north and north-east by the German Ocean, south and south-east by Suffolk, and west by Cambridgeshire, Lincolnshire, and the Wash. It is almost entirely insulated by the sea and the rivers which divide it on the south and west from the adjacent counties. The surface is generally level, but in some places varied by gentle undulations, but a ridge of high ground stretches northwards from Thetford to the coast. Though it is half encompassed by the ocean, it has but few seaports. The whole coast is bordered by sandbanks, which often extend far out to sea, and render navigation extremely dangerous. The principal rivers are the Ouse, the Nen, the Waveney, the Wensum, the Yare, and the Bure. Two-thirds of the whole county is arable ground, and is constantly kept under tillage. Cattle and sheep of a superior breed are reared and fed in the county. The famous Cambridge butter is made in the fens and marshlands; turkeys and geese are also reared for the London market. A large portion of the country is occupied as market gardens and orchards, the produce of which is perfection. All the principal crops are successfully grown. Rabbits and pheasants abound; while in the marshes and meres woodcocks, snipes, widgeon, teal, and wild ducks are very abundant. Norfolk returns six members to Parliament. Area, 1,354,301 acres. Pop. 448,609

It has a Gothic church in the form of a cross, chapels for Nonconformists, a free grammar school, sessions house, and a hospital. In the neighbourhood is Standard Hill, where the Battle of the Standard was fought in 1138, between the Scotch and English, in which the former were defeated. Market day, Wednesday. Pop. 3802

NORTHAM, Devon., par., 1½ miles from Bideford R. S., has P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Bideford. Pop. 5043

NORTHAMPTON, Northamp., a flourishing municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, the chief town of Northamptonshire, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts The principal streets are wide, commodious, and regular. There are several parish and district churches. All Saints' Church is a spacious building, with a square chancel, a tower, and a dome rising from the centre, and supported on four large columns. St Giles's, a large building in the form of a cross, surmounted by a lofty tower. St Peter's and St Sepulchre's are curious specimens of ecclesiastical architecture; the former was erected about the time of the Conquest, and the other by the Knights Templars, in imitation of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. There are several chapels for Nonconformists. The other public buildings and institutions are the general infirmary, the county gaol, the county hall, a handsome Grecian structure; the corn exchange, temperance hall, the town-hall, barracks, theatre, and a fine Gothic building called Queen's Cross, erected by Edward I. to the memory of his queen Eleanor; also a free grammar school, and other educational institutions, and a lunatic asylum. The town is of great historical interest, many remarkable events having taken place here, among which was a great victory gained by the earl of Warwick over the Lancastrians in 1460. In 1642 it was fortified for the parliament by Lord Brooke; and in 1675 it was nearly destroyed by fire. It was for a short time the seat of a university, and several parliaments have been held in it. It has large boot and shoe manufactures, extensive breweries, and lace is also manufactured. Northampton returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 61,012

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, an inland county, bounded north by the counties of Leicester, Rutland, and Lincoln, east by those of Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedford, south by Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire, and west by Oxfordshire and Warwickshire. The county is diversified by hill and dale, and distinguished from the neighbouring counties by extensive forests and woodlands, which add greatly to the variety and picturesque beauty of the scenery. The principal rivers are the Nen, the Charwell, the Leam, the Avon, the Welland, the Ouse, and the Tow. The climate is mild; the air being at all times of the year exceedingly pure and favourable to vegetation. Northamptonshire is purely an agricultural county, and considerable quantities of grain and roots are raised in the rich soil of the fens and upland district. The principal occupation is rearing and fattening cattle for the London market. The dairies are numerous and extensive; and large quantities of butter are regularly sent from them to the metropolis. The milk is used to fatten hogs for the same market. All the ordinary crops are raised. Northamptonshire returns four members to Parliament. Area, 630,358 acres. Pop. 308,149

NORTHUMBERLAND, an extensive border county, and the most northern of English counties, bounded on the east by the German Ocean, north and north-west by Scotland, west by Cumberland, and south by Durham. The districts that lie along the sea-coast are nearly level. Towards the centre the surface rises into large swelling ridges, which form the watersheds of the principal rivers. In this part of the county the land is well enclosed, and in some places well wooded. The western part, with the exception of a few intervening valleys, is an open and mountainous district. In the northern part, between Wooler and Alnwick, the mountains approach very closely to the coast, the top of Cheviot being about 20 miles from the mouth of the Tweed. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Tyne, the Coquet, the Aln, the Till, the Derwent, the Beaumont, the Wansbeck, the Blyth, and numerous smaller streams. Agriculture is carried on to a great extent, the soil being very fertile along the coast and the banks of the river; and the produce has been brought to a high state of perfection. The county is noted for its sheep and cattle, large numbers of which are fed and reared for exportation. The pasturage is abundant, and well adapted for grazing. The county is rich in minerals, coal being found in great abundance, consequently, there are a great number of collieries. The chief manufactures are connected with the mining of the coal and its transit. Lead, sandstone, or granite, slate clay, and limestone are found. Northumberland returns four members to Parliament. Area, 1,249,299

NORWICH, Norf., an ancient Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and market town, the chief town of the county of Norfolk, situated on the river Wensum, which is navigable up to the town, and crossed there by a number of bridges, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It has a circumference of five miles, and was formerly surrounded by an embattled wall, with gates, and flanked by towers, some remains of which are yet to be seen. The town has been much improved, and its chief public buildings are the castle and the cathedral; also a large number of churches, with several chapels for Nonconformists, and numerous charitable institutions. The ancient castle stands in the centre of the town, on an eminence, and commanding a fine view of the city. The principal tower is the only considerable part of the building which now remains, and this was first converted into a county gaol and now a museum. The cathedral is one of the most spacious and handsome buildings of the kind in the kingdom. The architecture is chiefly in the Norman style, of which the semi-circular arch and large short column are the leading features. It was founded by Herbert de Losinga, bishop of Norwich. The whole length of the church, from east to west, is 407 feet; of the nave, from western door to the transepts, 140 feet; the width of the transepts, from north to south, is 178 feet, and the width of the nave, including the side aisles, 72 feet. A lofty tower, surmounted by a spire, the whole height of which is 315 feet, rises above the intersection of the transepts with the nave and choir. The bishop's palace stands on the site of that which was built by the founder of the cathedral. The other public buildings are the guildhall, St Andrew's Hall, formerly the conventual church of a monastery of Dominicans or Black Friars; the assembly room, the theatre, the market-place, the shire hall, built in the ditch of the old castle, and barracks for cavalry. The Volunteer Drill hall, the corn exchange, which contains a spacious public hall, free library, and school of art, and the union workhouse. The charitable institutions are the Norfolk and Norwich Hospital, the dispensary, Doughty's Hospital, and Bethlehem Hospital, or Bedlam, an excellent institution for lunatics. There are, besides, a great number of charities and almshouses, a free grammar school, with a commercial school in connection with it, the Norwich literary institution and mechanics' institute, with various other educational institutions. A triennial musical festival is held in St Andrew's Hall. Norwich was at one time famous for its woollen manufactures. It is still famous for its textile fabrics, crape being a speciality. The city contains iron and brass foundries, as well as mills for the manufacture of flour, oil, mustard, and snuff. Norwich returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Weds. and Sats. NOTTINGHAM, Notts., a thriving manufacturing, municipal and parliamentary borough, market and county town, is situated on a rocky eminence, in a line with the course of the Trent, which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The little river Leen runs into the Trent close to the town, which stands on a steep hill. Of the public buildings, the castle is the most conspicuous. It is a large and handsome building, erected near the site of the ancient fortress; it was restored and fitted up as an art museum. The other public buildings are the churches, of which St Mary's is the principal, there are also several chapels for Nonconformists, an exchange, assembly rooms, lunatic asylums, a music hall, some hospitals, and numerous schools. The market-place is one of the most spacious in the kingdom. At its eastern end is the exchange, the guildhall, and other municipal offices. The town also contains a good county hall, an arboretum and public park, a university college, a science school, a free library, and natural history museum, high school, and a hospital. It is the chief seat of the lace manufacture in England, and one of the most important manufacturing centres in the kingdom. Nottingham returns three members to Parliament. OXFORD, Oxf., an Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and university town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is chiefly celebrated as a seat of learning, is delightfully situated on a gentle eminence at the confluence of the rivers Isis and Cherwell, which nearly encompass the city, and which are crossed by numerous bridges. From Magdalen Bridge, which crosses the Cherwell, the High Street, which is elegant and spacious, extends west under different names, through the whole length of the city. At Quatre Vois, or Carfax Church, this is crossed at right angles by St Giles's, the other principal street; and from these main branches most of the other minor streets diverge in different directions. Of the public buildings and institutions, the university first demands notice. It consists of numerous colleges and halls, each of which forms an establishment within itself, having its own students and teachers, and its own revenues and regulations; while they are all united under the government of the university, of which they form the members. The university acts as a corporate body, under a charter which received the royal assent in the reign of Charles I. The officers by which the university is immediately governed are the chancellor, the high steward, the vice-chancellor, and two proctors, who superintend the interest of the university; defend its privileges and laws; superintend the due performance of university regulations, call convocations, congregations, and courts; license taverns, and expel delinquents, and preserve the peace of the university. There are four terms kept in the year at the university; and degrees are taken in divinity, law, physic, music and the arts. The names of the colleges are:—All Souls' College, Balliol College, Brazenose College, Christ Church College, Corpus Christi College, Exeter College, Jesus College, Lincoln College, Hertford College, Keble College, Magdalen College, Manchester College, Mansfield College, Merton College, New College, Oriel College, Pembroke College, Queen's College, St John's College, Trinity College, University College, Wadham College, Worcester College, also Somerville Hall, Lady Margaret Hall, and St Hugh's Hall for women. Other buildings are the Bodleian Library (with spacious reading room, which was formerly the Radcliffe Library). It has one of the finest collections of books and manuscripts in Europe. The Clarendon Building (formerly the University Press); the Divinity schools, the Examination schools, museum, theatre, the Taylor Institution, the Union Society, St Mary's Church, the Martyrs' Memorial, also places of worship for all denominations. The town has also a town and county hall, the Radcliffe Infirmary, the working men's club, the music room, the corn exchange, and the general market. There are also several charity schools. The walks in the vicinity of the city and on the banks of the river are exceedingly beautiful. Oxford returns one member to Parliament, and Oxford University two members. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 45,742

OXFORDSHIRE, is an inland county, bounded on the east by Buckinghamshire, west by the county of Gloucester, and south, south-west, and south-east by Berkshire, north by Northamptonshire, from which it is separated by the river Cherwell, and north-west by Warwickshire. The county is considerably diversified by ranges of low hills. In its southern districts especially it possesses a pleasing alternation of hill and dale, but in the centre the surface is flat and level. The soil is fertile, and all the principal crops are successfully grown. The county is watered by numerous beautiful rivers, among which are the Thames, or Isis, the Cherwell, the Evenlode, the Thame, the Glyme, and the Windrush. All these unite at different points, and eventually constitute the Thames. The progress of cultivation has greatly reduced the rich meadow lands for which it was once famous, but cattle and sheep are still fed and reared for the London market. Oxfordshire is said by Camden to have been famous in ancient times for its woods, and even at present it is better supplied with trees than almost any other county of England. Medicinal springs are of common occurrence, among which the various kinds of chalybeate water chiefly prevail. Among its chief manufactures are blankets, gloves, and paper, and the working of ironstone. Oxfordshire returns three members to Parliament. Area, 472,717 acres. Pop. 188,225

PEMBROKE, a county of Wales, bounded on the east by Carmarthenshire, north-east by Cardiganshire, north and west by the Irish Sea, and south by the Bristol Channel. It abounds with antiquities and remains of almost every kind and era, but the most important objects of interest are its ancient castles, which formerly belonged to princes and great barons. Its surface is extremely irregular, and greatly diversified with hill and dale, but none of the hills are of any considerable elevation. The soil is various. The Teify and the Cleddy are the chief rivers. Wheat, barley, and oats are raised, and it also exports butter, and has valuable fisheries. Lead, limestone, coal, slate, and marl are found in the district. Pembrokeshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 401,691 acres. Pop. 81,995

PEMBROKE, Pemb., a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The vast ruins of its magnificent castle still give it an appearance of grandeur. The houses are ranged principally in one long street, at the end of which is the castle. The public buildings are a town-hall, a free grammar school, two parochial churches, dedicated to St Mary and St Michael, and several chapels for Nonconformists. It is one of the Pembroke district of boroughs which return one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 14,978

PLYMOUTH, Devon, a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and naval station, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is, on account of its harbour and docks, one of the most important maritime places in the kingdom. It is situated at the head of Plymouth Sound, an inlet of the English Channel which receives the Plym on the east, and the Tamer on the west. It is an important naval station, with a spacious harbour, a large shipping trade, and various industries. It is a port of call for steamers to Australia, New Zealand, and the Cape. The town stands on the eastern side of a peninsula enclosed between the estuaries of these two rivers, at the mouth of the Plym; and rather more than a mile to the west, on the estuary of the Tamar above mentioned, is Devonport (q.v.) Stonehouse lies between Plymouth and Devonport, connecting the two and forming a continuous line of buildings from the one to the other. There are a number of churches, among which are St Andrew's, an ancient perpendicular edifice; Charles' Church, a Roman Catholic cathedral, also district churches, chapel-of-ease, and places of worship for Nonconformists. It has two grammar schools, and a college called Western College, belonging to the Independents. There are also several charitable institutions, consisting of almshouses, hospitals of various kinds, charity schools, &c. The chief public buildings and establishments are the guildhall, the custom house, the Athenæum, with local museum, Marine Biological Laboratory, the baths, the freemasons' hall, the mechanics' institute, lecture hall, Albert memorial clock tower, the public library, which also comprises the Cottonian library, a valuable collection of books, pictures, engravings, curiosities, and works of art; the post office, the exchange, and a large and spacious market-place. The principal government establishments are at Devonport, among which are the gun-wharf, dockyard, steam factory, and principal barracks. There are also marine barracks, naval hospital, &c., at Stonehouse; various fortifications and defensive works have been erected at differnt times for their security. Its ancient citadel stands on an eminence to the south-east of the town, fronting the harbour, and contains the governor's residence and extensive barracks. The defensive works of the "Three Towns," as Plymouth, Devonport, and Stonehouse are sometimes called, have been increased and strengthened since the completion of the fortifications of Cherbourg by the addition of detached forts placed on eminences in the surrounding districts which command the town and its approaches. Devonport also has been enclosed by a complete system of fortifications on the land side. To the west of Plymouth citadel is an open space called the Hoe, which forms a public promenade and a convenient place for reviews and inspection of the troops in garrison. On its west side is a deep inlet, called Mill Bay, in which an extensive range of docks for vessels of large tonnage, called Keyham Docks, has lately been constructed, the greater part of the basins having been hewn out of the steep and solid limestone rock that rises almost perpendicularly from the shore. The port and harbour of Plymouth is distinguished for its great extent and capacity, and the security which it affords in its different parts. The harbour is one of the finest in the world; and is capable of containing the largest merchant vessels. Sutton Pool immediately adjoins the town, and lies to the north-west of the citadel. It is almost entirely surrounded by wharves, warehouses, and buildings of different kinds. It is the seat of important fisheries. Catwater Harbour is an extensive sheet of water, formed by the estuary of the Plym. The harbour or bay of Hamoaze is a magnificent basin at the mouth of the Tamar. At the mouth of these various harbours the great bay of Plymouth Sound forms an excellent roadstead, which is rendered secure by the construction of a breakwater across its entrance, on which is a lighthouse and a massive fort constructed in the centre on the harbour side. Altogether, there are nine docks, and the one last formed is the largest in Europe. There is also a rigging house, foundries for forging anchors with Nasmyth's steam hammer, and rope walks, for the manufacture of hempen cables and ropes for rigging. The victualling establishments of the dockyard are on a large scale, the Royal William victualling yard being furnished with immense slaughter-houses, and bakeries in which bread and biscuits are made by machinery. This is the birthplace of John Kitto, the distinguished Biblical scholar, and also of Sir Francis Drake. Plymouth returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Monday, Thursday, and Saturday. PORTLAND, Dorset, a small isle, or rather peninsula, in the English Channel, opposite Weymouth. It is connected with the mainland by a very singular ridge of pebbles, called the Chesil Bank, which extends 11 miles westwards from the island, along the coast, being separated from it by a long narrow channel called the Fleet. The island is composed of freestone, known as Portland stone, of which great quantities are exported to the metropolis and other places. Two lighthouses are erected on the island near the extremity, called the Bill, and it also contains a large convict establishment, the inmates of which are employed in the quarries, and on the breakwater and government works. The harbour of refuge is strongly fortified, and is one of the strongest places on the British coast

PORTSMOUTH, Hants., a municipal and parliamentary borough and fortified maritime, market town, and the principal naval station of England, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is situated on the west side of the island of Portsea, at the mouth of Portsmouth harbour, and is the most perfect fortress in Britain. It consists of the old town of Portsmouth, which is included within its walls, and the new town of Portsea. The suburbs of Landport, Kingston, Somerstown, and Southsea lie without the fortifications, on the east side of the united towns. In Portsmouth the principal public buildings connected with naval affairs are the victualling office, the government house, the houses of the lieutenant-governor and port-admiral, and the marine and military barracks. It has numerous churches, among which are the church of St Thomas, with a cenotaph to the memory of the murdered duke of Buckingham; the garrison chapel, in front of which is buried Sir Charles James Napier, and in which Charles II. married Catherine of Braganza. The other public buildings are the new town-hall, the county court, the market house, the custom house, a large and convenient building, with an extensive establishment; various charitable institutions, several barracks in different parts of the town, assembly rooms, ball-rooms, workhouse, philosophical society, mechanics' institute, female penitentiary, St Paul's Academy, general hospital, grammar school, and Victoria Park. Portsmouth is the seat of the civil and military establishments, and contains the residence of the port-admiral; its civil jurisdiction extends over Portsea, though the latter contains the large naval dockyards and gun-wharf which form, together with the harbour and the fortifications, the most striking features in the town. Portsmouth harbour undoubtedly surpasses every other in Great Britain for its capaciousness, depth, and security. At its entrance at Portsmouth it is about 400 yards wide, but it soon expands to a great width, and extends, in several branches, up to Fareham, Portchester, and Portsbridge. Everywhere the anchorage is good, the depth sufficient for ships of any size, the shelter complete, and the extent sufficient to contain almost the whole navy of England. Another great advantage is the neighbourhood of the roadstead of Spithead, which is so spacious that 1000 sail of vessels can anchor there with the greatest security. It is under the shelter of the Isle of Wight, and opposite the French arsenal of Cherbourg. The harbour is situated in the middle of the channel, and is completely defended by several detached forts and batteries of great strength. The works are for the most part situated on eminences which command the whole of the surrounding country. The most important of its defensive works are Gilkicker battery, Southsea Castle, and Fort Monckton, protecting the outward entrance. In addition to these, it is further defended by strong works on Portsmouth Hill and at Hillsea, and along the channel which separates Portsea Island from the mainland. These are called "the Lines." The dockyard being the chief naval arsenal of England, and the general rendezvous of the British fleet, is by far the largest in the kingdom. The sea-wall of the dockyard serves as a wharf, extending along the western shores of the harbour In the centre of the wall, facing the harbour, is the entrance into the great basin. The dockyard, which has been greatly improved and enlarged, has now an area of 293 acres. It has hemp stores, rigging stores, rope houses, sail loft, building slips, wood mills, with blockmaking machines, twelve dry docks, &c. The dockyard is entered from the town through a lofty gateway, beyond which are the porter's house, the mast houses, a large guard-house, the pay office, the royal naval college and the school of naval architecture. The commissioner's house, an immense range of storehouses, the anchor wharf, where hundreds of anchors are piled up ready for immediate service. In short, everything necessary for constructing, rigging, and outfitting vessels of war is to be found here. There is also an armoury capable of containing 20,000 stand of arms. Edward IV. surrounded it with fortifications, which were afterwards greatly extended by his successors. Portsmouth returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. RADNORSHIRE, a county of Wales, is bounded north by Montgomeryshire and Shropshire, east by Herefordshire, and south and west by Brecknockshire and Cardiganshire. The surface of the county is mountainous, and has a bleak and wild appearance, except towards the eastern and southern borders, and in those parts where it is intersected by several valleys, which are well watered. The Wye, the Ython, the Teme, the Lug, and the Edw are the principal rivers. The valleys afford a considerable extent both of meadow and of arable land, especially the vale of Wyeside and the vale of Radnor. The inhabitants of the agricultural districts are chiefly employed in rearing and feeding cattle. Radnorshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 272,128 acres. Pop. 17,119

RAMSGATE, Kent, a market town, municipal borough, and seaport, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is situated on the coast of the Isle of Thanet. It has an excellent artificial harbour. Is a well-known and favourite watering-place, with fine sands, and on account of its fine climate is much resorted to as a winter residence, and many pleasant excursions can be made in the neighbourhood. Its public buildings are the parish church of St Lawrence, a Roman Catholic chapel, also chapels-of-ease and district churches, several chapels for Nonconformists, market and custom houses, barracks, assembly rooms, baths, dispensary, and hospital. But the harbour is by far the most striking feature of the town. It consists of two immense piers, one of which is about 3000 feet in length, and the other about 1500 feet, which extend from the coast into the sea, and bend towards each other, so as to enclose a circular area of 48 acres, a narrow entrance being left between the extremities of the piers. It is the largest artificial haven in England, and is bordered by wet and dry docks, and guarded by batteries. There is a lighthouse at its entrance. The pier forms a very delightful promenade, and is the favourite walk of the inhabitants and visitors. The sea views are very fine, and in clear weather the cliffs of Calais may be seen, though they are 30 miles distant. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 24,676

RICHMOND, Surrey, a town and parish, situated on an eminence on the south bank of the Thames, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It was the seat of the royal palace of Sheen, only the gateway of which now remains. The scenery is very beautiful, comprising hill and dale, woods and winding streams. The elegant stone bridge which crosses the Thames here is about 100 yards long, and cost £26,000; from it one of the finest river views in England may be obtained. The delightful surroundings attract many families of distinction, whose handsome seats add to the beauty of the town, and render it remarkably gay. The town was originally called Sheen, but its name was changed to Richmond by Henry VII., when he built a new palace there. The town extends about a mile, or more, up the slope of a hill, rising gently from the river; while the houses are, for the most part, substantially built of brick, and encompassed with gardens and pleasure grounds. The parish church of St Mary Magdalen, consists of a nave, two aisles, and a chancel, with a square embattled tower at the west end. Among its monuments is one to Thomson, the poet, and another to Kean, the actor, The church of St Matthias is a striking building. There are several almhouses in the town; while on Richmond Hill stands the Wesleyan Theological College. Richmond Park, which was formed by Charles I., adjoins the town, and is well stocked with deer, and enclosed by a brick wall. Several ornamental buildings were erected here by Queen Caroline, and among them is an observatory, amply provided with astronomical instruments. The Old Park extends along the Thames to the Royal Gardens at Kew, which are opened to the public during the summer months, and which were united to it by George III. There are several market and nursery gardens in the neighbourhood. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 22,684

ROCHESTER, Kent, a very ancient Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. On the east it is connected by a continuous range of buildings with the town of Chatham, and on the west by a handsome iron bridge with Strood. The principal public buildings are the castle, the cathedral, the parish churches of St Margaret and St Nicholas, several chapels for Nonconformists, the town-hall and Watt's charity house and dormitories, for the reception and entertainment of poor travellers. The castle stands on an eminence rising abruptly from the river on the west of the town, and was built by Bishop Gundulph, the first bishop of Rochester after the Norman Conquest. The cathedral appears to have been built at different periods. It is in the form of a cross, and is divided into a nave, two side aisles, two transepts, and a choir, with a low tower, and a spire rising at the intersection of the nave and great transept. Several of the monuments are ancient and beautiful. Adjoining the cathedral are the remains of the chapter house and cloister, belonging to the priory, which exhibit a very beautiful series of Norman arches and ornaments, but are in a state of great delapidation. The other buildings are the guildhall, a custom house, theatre, assembly rooms, baths, the cathedral grammar school, a dispensary, and various charitable institutions. Its bishopric is, after Canterbury, the most ancient in England, as it is, also, the smallest. Rochester returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Friday. Pop. 26,309

SAINT IVES, Corn., a municipal borough, seaport, and market town, situated on St Ives Bay, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The church is a low but spacious building, with a granite cross, there are several chapels for Nonconformists, and a town-hall. The pilchard fishery is carried on in the bay to a great extent. There is a harbour and pier by Smeaton, and a breakwater. Owing to its mild climate and bathing facilities it has become a favourite summer resort. Pop. 6094

SAINT IVES, Hunts., a market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The parish church is a fine building, and there are numerous chapels for Nonconformists. It has a corn exchange, and a handsome stone bridge, in the middle of which is an old chapel or lighthouse. The markets for cattle and sheep held in this town are among the largest in the kingdom. Market day, Monday. Pop. 3005

SALCOMBE, Devon., a small seaport, 6 miles from Kingsbridge R. S., has P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Kingsbridge. It is the port of Kingsbridge, which lies about 4 miles north from it at the north extremity of the inlet. The coast scenery in the neighbourhood, including the headlands known as Bolt Head and Start Point, is bold and picturesque. The climate is extremely mild, and oranges and lemons will live through the winter in the open air without protection. It has a district church, a market house, and the remains of an old castle called Fort Charles on a rock at the entrance of the harbour. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries on the coast or in the coasting trade. Pop. 1593

SALISBURY, OR NEW SARUM, Wilts., an ancient Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and market town, situated on the Avon, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town is divided into a series of regular squares or blocks, which gives it an open and pleasant appearance. The principal public buildings are the cathedral and chapter-house, the bishop's palace, the College of Matrons for the widows of deceased clergymen, the parish churches, the council house, the infirmary, and the county gaol. The cathedral is justly considered to be one of the finest ecclesiastical buildings in Europe, and is a highly interesting specimen of the Gothic architecture of the 13th century. It is also remarkable for being the most uniform, regular, and systematic structure of the kind in England The whole building may be regarded as being composed of three distinct portions—namely, the church, with the tower and spire, the highest in England, the cloister, and the chapter-house. The library contains some very valuable MSS. and books. The Bishop's palace, which stands near the south-east corner of the cathedral, is a large irregular building, which appears to have been built, part at one time and part at another, in different and distinct periods. The College of Matrons, erected by Bishop Ward, is a regular building, with commodious gardens. The parish churches in the city are St Martin's, St Thomas a Becket's, and St Edmund's. The council house, where the assizes are held, is of brick, with stone quoins and dressings, and a handsome Grecian porch. The city also contains an infirmary, a hospital, assembly and concert rooms, a corn exchange and market-place planted with trees, in which are the statues of Professor Fawcett and Lord Herbert of Lea, a theatre, a grammar school connected with the cathedral, at which the celebrated Addison was educated; a county gaol, a penitentiary, a library and museum, which contains some of the finest antiquities in England, and several educational and charitable institutions. Before the Reformation, Salisbury contained a great variety of religious establishments, the remains of some of which are still in existence. The duke of Buckingham was beheaded here in the time of Richard III. An active trade is carried on in the agricultural produce of the surrounding district. Salisbury returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 17,362

SALISBURY PLAINS, Wilts., an elevated undulating tract of land, situated on the north of Salisbury, and extending over a superficial area of about 200 square miles. Stone henge, supposed to be an old Druidical temple, is on this place, about 6 miles north from Salisbury, and there are many vestiges of British and Roman remains scattered over its surface

SCARBOROUGH, Yorks., a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and seaport, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It stands in a recess of a beautiful bay, on the borders of the German Ocean, and rises from the shore on the slope of a hill in the form of an amphitheatre. The principal streets are spacious and well paved. The buildings on the cliff are almost unrivalled in respect of situation, having in front a beautiful terrace, nearly 100 feet above the sands, and commanding a variety of delightful prospects. It has a good harbour, and is a popular and fashionable seaside resort; named the "Queen of English watering-places," much frequented on account of its mineral waters, its excellent sea-bathing, and its beautiful surroundings. The chief public buildings are the town-hall, the Trinity House, several hospitals, asylums, and other charitable institutions a theatre, the Cliff Bridge, which connects the town with the Spas, affording means of communication across a deep rift 400 feet in width; a philosophical society and an interesting museum, and the aquarium, built at a cost of £100,000, is a great attraction, affording both instruction and amusement; two public libraries, a grammar school, and other educational establishments. The parish church formerly belonged to a Cistercian monastery dedicated to St Mary; besides this, there is St George's Church, the church of St Martin-on-the-Hill, and a chapel-of-ease, and several chapels for Non-conformists. The ruins of the ancient castle of great antiquity form a very picturesque object, and a great ornament to the town. The promontory on which they stand rises nearly 300 feet above the level of the sea, which washes its base on the north-east and south sides. This fortress is very ancient, and was the scene of many important events in English history. The harbour is the only haven of consequence on the eastern coast between the Humber and Tynemouth; and for this reason it is much resorted to during the violent easterly storms which prevail here. It is extensive, commodious, and easy of access, and has been much improved by the erection of piers. It has a lighthouse and a floating dock. Has considerable shipping and fisheries. The manufacture of jet ornaments is also largely carried on. Scarborough returns one member to Parliament. Market days. Thursday and Saturday. Pop. 33,776

SCILLY ISLANDS, Corn., a group of islands situated at the west extremity of the English Channel. about 20 miles south-west from the Land's End. They consist of about 140 islets and rocks, the principal of which are St Mary, Tresco, St Martin, St Agnes, Sampson, and Bryher. The soil is fertile in some parts, with a mild and healthy climate. Cattle are reared and fed in most of the islands, but they are neither numerous nor remarkable for size. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and the cultivation of lilies and other flowers for exportation. Area, 3560 acres. Pop. 1911, of which St Mary contains 1532. This is the largest, the most important, and best cultivated of the whole group. It possesses three villages, a pier, barracks, and custom house. The island is protected by a fort and batteries, and a small garrison is kept there. Steam packets ply regularly between Penzance and the islands, which are connected with the mainland by a submarine telegraph

SHEERNESS, Kent, a market town, seaport, and naval station, situated on the Isle of Sheppey, at the mouth of the river Medway, with safe harbour, dockyard, and barracks. Has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Is a favourite watering-place, having good bathing and boating, and fine esplanades. A fort was built at Sheerness to defend the entrance to the Medway in the reign of Charles II.; but it was destroyed by the Dutch. Since that period the fort has been rebuilt and greatly enlarged and strengthened by the addition of new works, so that the entrance of the river is now effectually commanded and protected from any attack that may be made by sea. It now constitutes a regular garrison, commanded by a governor, with a lieutenant-governor, a fort major, and other officers of inferior rank. Adjoining the fort is the king's yard or dock, chiefly used for repairing ships. The residence of the port-admiral, telegraph office, large barracks, and coastguard station are at Garrison Point, on the outside of the yard. The town comprises five parts—Sheerness proper, which includes the dockyards and citadel, Blue Town, Banks Town, Marine Town, and Mile Town. It contains a church in Mile Town, a Roman Catholic church in Marine Town, a chapel close to the dockyard, and several chapels for Nonconformists. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 13,841

The principal are the old parish church, dedicated to St Peter, ornamented with a fine tower and spire, St Mary's Roman Catholic chapel, a handsome building in the Decorated English style of architecture, and numerous other churches, also chapels for Nonconformists. The public buildings are the town-hall, cutlers' hall, the general infirmary, the assembly rooms, Norfolk market, the corn exchange, with a stone Corinthian front; the music hall, public baths, newsrooms, assay office, barracks, and an elegant stone cross. Besides these, there are numerous schools and educational institutions, the chief of which are the royal free grammar school, Wesley College, a proprietary grammar school, the collegiate proprietary school, several charity schools, the People's College, a school of design, a school of practical science and metallurgy, two libraries, a literary and philosophical society, mechanics' institute, lyceum, and Church of England instruction society, all of which are possessed of good libraries and museum. There are the botanic gardens, an athenæum, the Mappin Art Gallery, and the St George's Museum, founded by Mr Ruskin, and to which he presented many interesting and valuable articles; public parks, baths, &c. The chief charitable establishments, besides the general infirmary, are the dispensary, the Shrewsbury hospital, Hollis's hospital, the licensed victuallers' asylum, and the charities belonging to the Cutlers' Company. The town is celebrated for the manufacture of cutlery of every description. Britannia metal goods, hardware, iron, steel, and other manufactures are extensively carried on. SHIELDS, NORTH, Northumb., a market town and prosperous seaport, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is contiguous to and included within the limits of the parliamentary borough of Tynemouth. It has of late years increased greatly in size and population. It contains a parish church and several district churches, a chapel-of-ease, several chapels for Nonconformists, a custom house, a covered market, free library, and museum, a town-hall, public hall, mechanics' institute, a theatre-royal, a dispensary, a subscription library, which possesses an extensive collection of valuable books, an asylum for sick and friendless seamen, a lying-in hospital, waterworks, several schools, and many well-conducted and flourishing benefit societies; also the Northumberland Park, containing the remains of St Leonard's Hospital. The harbour is bordered with quays, and is large enough to accommodate 2000 sail of ships. The principal trade of the town consists in the exportation of coals to London and other places along the eastern coasts of England and Scotland. Many vessels are also employed in the Baltic and American trade. There is a submarine mine station at Clifford's Park. North Shields unites with Tynemouth, &c., to return one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 6046

SHIELDS, SOUTH, Durh., a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. A flourishing and rapidly-rising seaport and manufacturing town, with various industries. There are several good streets and handsome houses in the newest part of the town and in the suburbs of Westoe. Its principal public buildings are the town-hall and exchange, a market-place, custom house, two theatres, public library, newsroom, and museum, the marine school, Ingham Infirmary, and public baths. It has a parish church, some district churches and chapels-of-ease, several chapels for Nonconformists. The pier parade, on which is erected a memorial to Greathead and Wouldhave, the inventors of the life-boat, divides the North and South Marine Parks. The Tyne Docks, the property of the North-Eastern Railway, have an extensive shipping trade in coal and coke. There was a colliery explosion here in 1839, when fifty-nine persons lost their lives. Along the harbour are ship and boat yards, and iron, glass, and rope works; paint and varnish are also manufactured. South Shields returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 78,391

SHREWSBURY, Salop., an ancient municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, and the chief town of the county, beautifully situated on the Severn, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The climate is healthy, and the town has a bold and commanding appearance. Many of the houses are very old, but they present a picturesque appearance, being built of wood and plaster, and having the gable ends turned towards the street. The castle stands on a narrow neck of land washed by the Severn, which is spanned by the English bridge of seven arches, the Welsh bridge of five, and the Kingsland bridge, an iron bridge which leads to the suburbs of Abbey-Foregate, Coleham, Frankwell, Castle Foregate, and Kingsland. The castle was built by Roger de Montgomery, a Norman baron, and kinsman of William the Conqueror. The building has fallen into decay, but the keep is still standing, and traces of the ramparts and walls, which once defended the town, still remain. The town contains several churches and chapels for Nonconformists. The public buildings are a town and county hall, with a handsome stone facade, barracks, a free grammar school, council house, where Charles I. stayed in 1642, an old market house, corn exchange, infirmary, eye, ear, and throat hospital, public rooms, music hall, market hall, county museum and free library on the site of the old grammar school. The town has also charitable institutions, several schools, a lunatic asylum, public baths, an old building called the White Hall, several learned societies and institutions, a workman's hall and lecture room, a mechanics' institute, and assembly rooms. At one end of the town there is a column raised to the memory of General Lord Hill, and in Market Square there is a statue of Lord Clive. Shrewsbury is a place of great antiquity, and of considerable note in history. Many noted men, among whom are Judge Jeffreys, the Marquis of Halifax, Sir Philip Sidney, and others, have been educated at the grammar school here. It is a railway centre, and manufactures agricultural implements; glass-painting, malting, and ironfounding are also carried on. Shrewsbury returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 27,704

SHROPSHIRE, OR SALOP, an inland county, on the borders of Wales, bounded on the north by Denbighshire, a detached part of Flintshire, and Cheshire, east by Staffordshire, south by Worcestershire and Herefordshire, and west by Radnorshire, Montgomeryshire, and Denbighshire The county is mountainous in the south, the rest is greatly diversified and abounds with beautiful landscape scenery. The shire is watered by the Severn, which runs through the middle of the county, with its numerous tributaries, among which are the Perry, the Mede, the Warf, the Cound Serm, the Clun, the Onny, the Rea, and the Corve. There are several lakes, the largest of which is Ellesmere, covering a space of about 116 acres. All the ordinary kinds of grain and green crops are grown, also hemp, flax, and hops, on the Herefordshire and Worcestershire borders. Cattle and sheep are fed and reared, the sheep producing fine wool of a very superior quality. Most of the famous Cheshire cheese is made here. Coal, iron, lead, salt, sandstone, and limestone abounds in the neighbourhood. During the revolts which occurred after the death of Edward I., and also during the wars of York and Lancaster, Shropshire was occasionally the scene of military events, the principal of which was the battle of Shrewsbury, fought in 1403. Many curious and beautiful Roman remains were found at Wroxeter. Of the Norman and subsequent ages, many memorials exist in the castles, priories, and churches of the county, which also contains various British and Roman encampments The trade manufactures, and even the agriculture of Shropshire, have been greatly advanced by its canal and railroads, of which there are several. Shropshire returns four members to Parliament. Area, 826,055 acres. Pop. 254,745

SOMERSETSHIRE, a maritime county, bounded on the north-west by the Bristol Channel, north by Gloucestershire, east and south-east by Wiltshire and Dorsetshire, and south and west by Devonshire. This county was the scene of many important events in the time of the Saxons. The surface is very varied, comprising every gradation, from the bleak hill and barren moor to the rich and highly-cultivated vale and fen and marsh land on the coast, which affords grazing for cattle and horses. The Quantock Hills extend northward from Taunton, and descend into a cultivated vale of some extent. Westward, the county is entirely mountainous and hilly, and is intersected by various ranges, running from east to west, from which numerous lateral branches radiate. Along the slope and base of the hills the low land is dry, and well cultivated; but thence towards the coast it forms a vast and widespreading district of fenny lands known by the name of the Marshes; through the middle of which runs an elevated range, which separates them into two great divisions. The principal river is the Avon, which divides the county from Gloucestershire. The others are the Yeo, the Parret, the Ivel, the Tone, the Brue, and the Axe. The large tract of land between the Parret and the Tone is called the Isle of Athelney. The county is noted for its agricultural produce, large crops of corn, herbage, and farm produce being sent to other markets. London, Bristol, Salisbury, and other parts of the kingdom are always well supplied with oxen, sheep, and hogs from Somerset. The best goose feathers for beds are obtained from geese fed on the marshes. The greater part of the cheese is made in the south parts of the county; and that of the Cheddar district is said to exceed any in the kingdom. The chief minerals are lead, calamine, and coal, the latter being found in great abundance, and in various parts of the north of the Mendip Hills. Besides these, limestone, paving-stone, slate, freestone, marl, and fuller's earth are found in different parts of the county. Somersetshire returns seven members to Parliament. Area, 1,047,220 acres. Pop. 510,064

SOUTHAMPTON, Hants., a municipal and parliamentary borough, seaport, and market town, and a county of itself, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town presents a very picturesque appearance from the water and from different points of view on land. It is one of the most important seaports of the kingdom. The old town was at one time surrounded by walls, and had seven gateways, four of which still remain, also some traces of the walls. It has several churches, among which are St Michael's, All Saints', Holyrood, St Lawrence's, St John's, and St Mary's. St Michael's forms the eastern side of the square of the same name, and consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a low tower rising from the centre, and terminating in a fine slender octagonal spire, which forms a very conspicuous object. It contains a handsome monument to the Lord Chancellor Wriothesley. There are a number of other churches, also several chapels for Nonconformists, and a synagogue for Jews. The other public buildings are the Hartley Institute, containing a lecture hall, museum, library, and newsrooms; the assembly rooms, a commodious theatre, a music hall, a military asylum for the orphans of soldiers, the headquarters of the Ordance Survey, a free grammar school, a diocesan collegiate school, baths, a hospital and dispensary, a female penitentiary, the Royal Yacht Club-house, and several charitable institutions and almshouses. Besides these, there are polytechnic and mechanics' institutions, with libraries and museums attached, a tower built on the site of Southampton Castle, and a botanic garden. There are various buildings of considerable antiquity in different parts of the town, and the Bar-gate is a curious and ancient fortified gate-house, with a large room in the upper part of the building which is used as a guildhall. The new tidal dock was opened in 1890 by Queen Victoria; it is 18 acres in extent, and 26 feet deep at low water spring-tides, and cost £300,000. It has a large and increasing shipping trade. Steamers leave here for the West Indies, Australia, the Cape, America, and numerous other places. Considerable trade is carried on with France, Spain, Portugal, and the Channel Islands. Southampton returns two members to Parliament. Market day, Friday. Pop. 93,596

STAFFORDSHIRE, an inland county, nearly in the centre of the kingdom, bounded north-east and east by Derbyshire and Leicestershire, south-east by Warwickshire, south by Worcestershire, and west and north-west by Shropshire and Cheshire. This county belongs to the diocese of Lichfield The county is greatly diversified by barren moorlands and fruitful valleys; a range of hills runs along the north-west border, spreading out towards the north over the entire breadth of the county. To this bleak and hilly district the other parts of the county present a striking contrast, being for the most part level, or only interspersed with gently rising eminences. The chief rivers are the Trent, with its tributaries, the Dove, the Manifold, the Hamps, the Churnet, the Blythe, the Mease, the

Sow, the Penk, and the Tame. The Stour and Smestal run towards the south into the Severn. The climate is cold and damp, and agriculture is in a very backward state. The county contains several iron foundries, blast furnaces, slitting mills, and other branches of the iron trade, which employ great numbers of people, and a large proportion of the working classes and mechanics are employed in the manufacture of earthenware, glass, hardware, nails, toys, and japanned goods. The minerals include coal, iron, limestone, copper, and lead. Many varieties of marble are found in the county, and alabaster is obtained in great quantities. Freestone of very good quality is also found, extensive quarries of it being worked in different places. Clays of every description are abundant, and form the principal material used in its potteries, which have acquired a world-wide celebrity, not only from their vast extent, but also from the beauty and excellence of the ceramic ware produced there, and from the great improvements which were introduced into the manufacture by the inventive genius and indefatigable labours of Wedgwood. The Wedgwood Institute, a handsome building, comprising a school of art, a museum, a free library and a reading room, has been erected to his memory for the services he rendered to his country. The manufacture of glass is chiefly carried on in the neighbourhood of Stourbridge. The silk trade is also carried on to a great extent. It is a railway centre, and has numerous canals. Staffordshire returns seven members to Parliament. Area, 728,468. Pop. 1,103,322

SUFFOLK, a maritime county, bounded on the north by the county of Norfolk, west by Cambridge, south by Essex, and east by the German Ocean. The river Stour divides it from Essex, the Little Ouse and Waveney from Norfolk, and the Lark, a tributary of the Great Ouse, separates it from Cambridge. The surface is for the most part level, without any considerable eminences; and the soil is various, consisting of a strong loam or a clay marl bottom, sandy soil, and rich loam; the county is well watered and wooded, and the scenery in some parts very beautiful. The principal rivers are the Stour, the Waveney, the Ouse, the Orwell, the Deben, the Ald, and the

Blyth, along the coast, and the Lark on the west. The attention of the Suffolk farmer is mainly directed to agriculture; although dairy farming is by no means neglected in any part of the county. All the principal crops are grown with great success. Butter is made in great quantities, as well as cheese, although the latter is of inferior quality. Suffolk cows have long been celebrated for yielding abundance of milk, and the county is no less noted for its breed of horses and hogs. All kinds of poultry are kept and fed for the London markets, especially turkeys. Large numbers of pigeons are reared in the open field; and there are many rabbit-warrens on the heaths and tracts of moorland that intersect the county. Suffolk returns five members to Parliament. Area, 947,681 acres. Pop. 365,479

SUNDERLAND, Durh., a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and flourishing seaport, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts It has a good harbour, spacious docks, and a large shipping trade. Its chief public buildings are the churches, including the parish church, a large and plain brick building, and the parish churches of Monk-Wearmouth and Bishop-Wearmouth, which may be considered as suburbs of Sunderland; several chapels for Nonconformists, various benevolent institutions and charity schools, the Lyceum hall for public meetings, town-hall, museum, art gallery, winter garden, the Liberal club, the County Constitutional Club, a corn exchange, public library, athenæum, assembly room, a workmen's hall, infirmary, barracks, custom house, and excise office. The town possesses a public park in which are statues of Sir Henry Havelock and Jack Crawford. The harbour is formed by two piers, projecting from the land on the north and south sides of the river, and is defended by batteries. There is a lighthouse on its north pier. There are several docks of large size, the Hendon dock, comprising 11 acres, the North dock 6 acres, the Hudson Dock, north, 18 acres, the Hudson Dock, south, 14 acres. Coal is the chief export. Most of the coals go to the metropolis and to different places along the eastern coast. Considerable quantities are also sent to the Baltic, and to France and Holland. The town is frequented by visitors during the summer months for the sake of sea-bathing. Its manufactures are flint and bottle-glass, earthenware, copperas, coal-tar, cordage, chain cables, sail-cloth, and chemicals. Ship-building is carried on to a great extent. Sunderland returns two members to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 131,015

SURREY, the "South kingdom," one of the inland counties, bounded south by Sussex, east by Kent, west by Berkshire and Hampshire, and separated on the north from Middlesex and Buckinghamshire by the river Thames. As the capital of the Roman settlements in Britain was in the immediate neighbourhood of Surrey, numerous Roman antiquities have been found from time to time within its limits. St George's Fields, Southwark, where coins and curious tessellated pavements have been discovered at different periods, was the centre of various Roman ways. The county is diversified with hill and dale; the hills in some parts rising to a considerable height, and presenting some very extensive and beautiful views. In some places naked heaths impart a wildness to the prospect, and offer a striking contrast to the well-cultivated portions of the county; while the hills, which rise one beyond another in a regular succession of well-wooded ranges, are interspersed with valleys abounding in rich meadow land or covered in summer with luxuriant crops of grain and fodder. The Wey, the Mole, and the Wandle run through the county, and the Thames washes its northern borders. The river Lodden skirts the county on its west side. Wheat and barley are grown, the latter being raised chiefly for malting, for which purpose it is reckoned equal in quality to any in the kingdom. Garden peas and beans are cultivated in the immediate neighbourhood of the metropolis and the districts of sandy loam near the Thames, in the neighbourhood of Mortlake. Turnips are raised in large quantities, and hops of the finest quality are grown about Farnham. Vegetables, especially cabbages and carrots; vetches, clover, and sainfoin, are extensively cultivated; and a greater quantity of land is employed in raising medicinal herbs than in any other county in Great Britain. Cattle, sheep, calves, and house-lambs are reared for the London market, and great numbers of cows are kept near London to supply the metropolis with milk. Large numbers of hogs, of the Berkshire breed, are fed, and many geese are kept on the commons and in the Weald. The chief minerals found in the district are iron ore and fuller's earth; there are also extensive quarries of stone. The neighbourhood of Dorking contains large quarries of excellent limestone, and chalk is abundant in all parts, and is in general use as a manure when burnt. Surrey returns six members to Parliament. Area, 478,782 acres. Pop. 572,060

SUSSEX, one of the southern maritime counties, bounded west by Hampshire, north by Surrey, east and north-east by Kent, and south by the British Channel. This county contains many Roman and a few British antiquities. The county is varied by downs and intervening valleys, through which many little streams run towards the sea. The wooded scenery and the rich pasture lands give to the county this appearance. The wastes are very considerable, and chiefly occupy the north side of the county. The principal rivers are the Arun, Rother, Ouse, and Adur, all small, and falling into the British Channel. From the earliest period Sussex has been celebrated for its timber, especially oak, which is the chief feature of the Weald. All the common crops are raised, and in the western part there are some considerable orchards. It is distinguished for its superior breeds of cattle and sheep, the black-faced Southdown sheep being in high repute. Great numbers of sheep and cattle are fed on the downs and rich marsh lands, which afford abundant crops of excellent hay. The minerals found are limestone, ironstone, chalk, fuller's earth, and red ochre. Sussex marble is also highly esteemed. The county returns six members to Parliament. Area, 936,911 acres. THAMES, one of the most noted rivers of Great Britain. It rises, under the name of the Isis, about 2 miles south from Cirencester, and near Lechlade, 138 miles from London, it becomes navigable for barges. After receiving the Windrush and the Evenlode, it reaches Oxford, and flows round the city to the north-east. Here it is joined by the Cherwell, after which it proceeds to Abingdon, and thence to Dorchester, where it receives the Thame. Continuing its course in a south-east direction, by Wallingford to Reading, and forming a boundary to the counties of Berks, Bucks, Surrey, Middlesex, Essex, and Kent, it flows by the towns and villages of Henley, Marlow, Maidenhead, Windsor, Eton, Egham, Staines, Laleham, Chertsey, Weybridge, Shepperton, Walton, Sunbury, East and West Moulsey, Hampton, Thames Ditton, Kingston, Teddington, Twickenham, Richmond, Isleworth, Brentford, Kew, Mortlake, Barnes, Chiswick, Hammersmith, Putney, Fulham, Wandsworth, Battersea, Chelsea, Lambeth, Westminster, London, Southwark, Limehouse, and Dept-

ford; and thence it flows on past Greenwich, Erith, and Greenhithe, Gravesend, and Leigh, into the North Sea after a course of 250 miles. It receives, in its course from Dorchester, the rivers Kennet, Loddon, Coln, Wey, Mole, Wandle, Lea, Roding, Darent, and Medway, and drains a basin with an area estimated at 6160 square miles. It is navigable to Deptford for ships of any burden, and to London Bridge for vessels of 200 tons

THANET, ISLE OF, Kent, the north east extremity of the county, separated from the mainland by the river Stour and the Nethergong rivulet. The coast of this island is formed by a perpendicular cliff of chalk; the soil is dry, and the air remarkably pure and bracing. The country is open, the surface level, and the prospect extensive; comprising in the interior an expanse of rich and highly cultivated fields, and, towards the coast, a delightful view of the ocean, varied with the shipping that are continually passing and repassing. This was the first possession of the Saxons in Britain. Near the North Foreland there are two large tumuli, said to have been erected as memorials of a battle fought between the Saxons and the Danes, in 853. It is about 10 miles from east to west, and 5 from north to south. On its shores are the well-known watering-places, Margate, Ramsgate, and Broadstairs

TYNE, the chief river of Northumberland. It is formed by two branches called the North and South Tyne, which unite near Nether Warden, above Hexham, and form a large river that passes by Newcastle, below which town it is navigable for vessels of 300 or 400 tons. It is of great commercial importance, and drains an area of 1100 square miles. After a course of 80 miles, it falls into the North Sea through a broad estuary

TYNEMOUTH, Northumb., a municipal and parliamentary borough and town, has R. S., and P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under North Shields. It is the chief watering-place of Northumberland, and is noted for the remains of its ancient castle and priory, situated on a high rock, and inaccesible from the sea There is but little left of this ancient bulwark, except a strong gateway, which serves for artillery barracks and military magazines. The priory was within the castle, now surrounded by a bastioned wall, and the ruins of the priory church still present many elegant specimens of Norman architecture. The beautiful little chapel at the east end of the priory church has been restored Tynemouth, from its exposed situation, is extremely bleak and uncomfortable in the winter season, but is much frequented by visitors during the summer for the sake of sea-bathing. Commodious baths have been erected; and there are delightful walks in the neighbourhood. The borough includes the prosperous seaport of North Shields. Tynemouth returns one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 46,267

WARWICK, Warw., a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is a place of great antiquity, and justly celebrated for the grandeur of its castle, and for the handsome appearance of its other public buildings. The town stands on a rocky hill which rises abruptly from the river flowing at its base. In 1694 it was nearly destroyed by fire, but it has retained much of its mediæval character and antique architecture. At the east extremity of the main street is an ancient gate, the picturesque appearance of which has been injured by modern embellishments. At the western extremity is another gateway, surmounted by an ancient chapel, a plain structure, now used as a free school. Nearly in the centre of the street, between the gates, is the town-hall, a handsome stone structure. The street which intersects this thoroughfare, and passes nearly from north to south, contains in its north division many spacious and handsome edifices. The chief public buildings besides the town-hall, which is a handsome stone structure, are the county hall, the courthouse, the gaol, the house of correction for the county, the hospital, the endowed grammar school, and the market house, also churches and chapels for Nonconformists. Warwick also possesses both an ancient castle and a chapel, which rank among the best specimens of these two classes of architecture. The principal church is dedicated to St Mary. In the great fire of 1694 the greater part of it was destroyed, but the choir, with some rooms on the north-east, and the chapel of Our Lady fortunately escaped. A new church was begun, and finished in the year 1704. At the west end is a square tower, the height of which, from the base to the top of the battlements, is 130 feet. The interior is rendered highly interesting to architects and archæologists by the remains of the ancient structure. The chapel of Our Lady, usually termed the Beauchamp Chapel, adjoins the chancel of St Mary's Church on the south. The exterior is a beautiful specimen of the Decorated English or florid Gothic style, and is covered with tracery, panels, and other architectural enrichments. Besides the buildings that have been already mentioned, is an almshouse called Leicester Hospital, and several other charitable institutions and schools. Over the Avon is an elegant stone bridge of a single arch. On the north bank of the river stands the castle, on a mass of solid rock, nearly 100 feet higher than the level of the Avon; but on the north side it is on a level with the town, and commands a charming prospect from the terrace. It is at present one of the noblest castles remaining in England, and is still inhabited, the whole of the apartments are elegantly furnished, and adorned with many original paintings, the works of eminent masters. Warwick unites with Leamington to return one member to Parliament. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 11,903

WARWICKSHIRE, a central county, bounded on the north-east by Leicestershire, east by Northamptonshire, south-east by Oxfordshire, south-west by Gloucestershire, west by Worcestershire, and north-west by Staffordshire. The surface affords an agreeable alternation of hill and dale, eminently beautiful, and remarkably adapted to the purposes of agriculture, which is much favoured by the mild climate. The soil possesses every variety, and is fertile: nearly seven-eights of the whole county being in crops and pasture. The county is noted for its grazing and dairy farms. The principal rivers are the Avon, the Tame, the Leam, the Rea, the Stour, the Alne, the Arrow, the Anker, the Blythe, the Swift, the Bourne, the Dene, and the Itchen. The chief medicinal springs are those of Leamington and Newnham-Regis. It has an extensive system of inland navigation, by means of canals. There are extensive pastures, and the principal woodlands are still to be found in the neighbourhood of its former great forest, in the middle, west, and north districts, but nearly every part of the county abounds with valuable and ornamental timber. The chief minerals found are limestone and freestone rock; there are also considerable quarries of blue flagstone. The county contains many interesting antiquities and mediæval remains. It has also memories of Shakespeare, "George Eliot," Samuel Butler, David Cox, and others. Warwickshire returns four members to Parliament. Area, 563,946 acres. Pop. 801,760

WASH, an estuary on the east coast between the counties of Norfolk and Lincoln. It receives several rivers, and contains many shoals, which are left dry at low water. WESTMINSTER, Midd., a municipal and parliamentary borough and city on the north bank of the Thames forming the west part of London, having Marylebone on the north, Chelsea and Kensington on the west. The Thames separates it from the borough of Lambeth, with which it is connected by several bridges. This city originated in a priory, founded by Sebert, king of Essex, about 610, on a tract of land called Thorney Island. Offa, however, changed it in 785 to an abbey, and the abbots rose in the course of a few years to distinction. William the Conqueror is the first sovereign on record who was crowned here. The Abbey was principally indebted for its celebrity and splendour to Edward the Confessor, who rebuilt it about 1060. In the reign of Henry III. the greater part of the present edifice was again rebuilt in the beautiful Early English style of architecture, by which it is chiefly characterised. In 1540 the abbey church was, by letters patent of Henry VIII., constituted a cathedral; and thus Westminster was first raised to the dignity of a city. The monastery was restored by Mary, who succeeded Henry VIII. On the 21st of May 1559, the monks were again displaced, and the church rendered a collegiate church, on a basis somewhat similar to that on which it had been established by Henry VIII. The present abbey church consists of a nave and two side aisles, separated by ranges of lofty and slender clustered columns, supporting the roof, which is raised to a great height. The entire length of the whole edifice within the walls, including Henry's VII.'s chapel, is 510 feet, the breadth of the nave and aisles 78 feet, and the breadth across the transepts 203 feet. On entering the great western door the body of the church presents an impressive appearance; lightness, loftiness, and elegance are its distinguishing features: but the numerous monuments which fill up the open spaces and cover the walls detract greatly from the beauty of its appearance. The choir of the church, in the form of a semi-octagon, was formerly surrounded by eight chapels; they are now reduced to seven, and that which was the central chapel now forms the porch of the chapel built by Henry VII. In the south transept, in the part called the Poet's Corner, there are many interesting memorials of men whose genius and talents in science, literature, and the arts entitle them to the honourable recollection of posterity. In other parts of the church there are also monuments to the memory of several distinguished heroes and statesmen. The magnificent chapel of Henry VII. is a curious and elaborate specimen of ecclesiastical architecture. The principal object within the chapel is the tomb of the founder, enclosed by a screen of gilt brass, which is said to have been executed by Torregiano of Florence, the rival of Michael Angelo. The ashes of the jealous and vindictive Elizabeth rest here, near those of her hapless victim, Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots. The bronze figure of Margaret Tudor, mother of Henry VII., is one of the finest pieces of casting in the whole building. Beneath this chapel is the vault prepared on the death of Caroline, consort of George II., in 1737, which contains the remains of several members of the present reigning family. The whole exterior of this building has been cased with Bath stone; and all the rich and elaborate sculptures of the canopies, pedestals, buttresses, and windows have been carefully restored in imitation of the original building. The ancient chapter house, which is octagonal in form, with the roof supported by a branching central column, was erected by Henry III. in 1250. The celebrated school of Westminster, which was refounded by Elizabeth in 1560, with an establishment for the maintenance and instruction of boys, also communicates with the cloisters of the cathedral. Of the parish churches of Westminster, St Margaret's may be noticed as the oldest place of worship in the city; but besides this there are many churches and chapels for various denominations. Of the public buildings, the ancient residence of the kings of England, built by Canute, and burnt in 1263, and Westminster Hall, memorable for having been the scene of many important transactions, deserve particular notice. The latter was erected by William Rufus, or William II., about 1097. Three centuries after its construction it was altered by Richard II. Adjoining this are the new Houses of Parliament, or New Palace of Westminster, a magnificent pile of buildings built by Sir Charles Barry. The Victoria Tower, at the south-west corner of the structure forms a conspicuous object in the view of London from the surrounding hills. The palace fronts the river, and is 900 feet in length. The clock tower is also a conspicuous feature in the building, and contains a monster bell called Big Ben, weighing 16 tons 11 cwts. 3 qrs., on which the hours are now struck. The Palace of St James was originally an hospital, out of part of which Henry VIII. constructed the present buildings as an appendage to the Palace of Whitehall. A spacious park adjoins this palace. Opposite to Whitehall, or the Banqueting House, designed by Inigo Jones as a portion of the palace which James I. intended to erect, are the Treasury and other government offices, and close to these is the Horse Guards, which contains the chief departments of the War Office. In Downing Street are the principal government offices, and to the south of the Treasury are the Foreign Office, India Office, and Colonial Office. The old bridge of Westminster was completed in 1750, until which time there was no other mode of communication across the Thames than by ferry-boats. It has been replaced by a bridge, built by Mr Thomas Page, and opened for traffic in 1862 at a cost of £500,000; it is built of iron, and is 1160 feet long by 85 wide. From this bridge on the north side of the Thames, the Thames Embankment runs to Blackfriars Bridge. In the Adelphi is a handsome edifice belonging to the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce. In the great hall is a series of paintings, unique in modern times, by James Barry. The Royal Academy of Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture is a valuable institution for the promotion of science and the fine arts. There are also many magnificent hotels, club-houses, and private mansions of noblemen and others, and Buckingham Palace, the residence of Her Majesty, at the west end of St James's Park. Westminster returns one member to Parliament. Pop. 80,789

WESTMORELAND, bounded on the north-west by Cumberland, on the south-west and south by Lancashire, and on the east and north-east by Yorkshire and Durham. Traces of two Roman military roads are still visible in this county, which formed a part of the kingdom of Northumbria under the Saxon Heptarchy. It is a region composed for the most part of lofty mountains, naked hills, and bleak barren moors. The valleys in which the rivers run are tolerably fertile. The centre consists of fells and moors, intersected with numerous valleys. Helvellyn, on the borders of Cumberland, attains an elevation of 3055 feet above the level of the sea; and it is for the most part separated from Yorkshire by parts of the Pennine range, which traverses the east part of the county. The other mountains are Cross-fell, Bow-fell, and Rydal Mount. The climate on the south-west side is humid, owing to its contignity to the Irish Sea and Atlantic Ocean. The principal rivers are the Eden, the Lune, the Kent, the Sprint, the Lowther, and the Troutbeck. Windermere, or Winandermere, and Ullesmere are the principal lakes, and there are also several other smaller ones. The lake fish are exported in considerable quantities. Turnips, clover, and wheat are the principal crops The pasture lands are extensive, and sheep and cattle are fed for the central and southern markets. Swine are also reared, and a considerable trade is done in the curing and exporting of bacon. The farms are in general small. In some parts considerable portions of land are covered with coppices, consisting principally of oak, ash, alder, birch, and hazel. Geese are reared on the mountains and moorlands in large numbers for exportation. Veins of metallic ore, chiefly of copper and lead, have been occasionally discovered; and some unsuccessful attempts have been made to work them. The small coalfields that exists in the county are very poor The mountainous parts abound with various sorts of slate, all of which are used by the inhabitants for covering the roofs of their buildings, and for other purposes. There is also a great deal of granite and marble Westmoreland returns two members to Parliament. Area, 485,432. Pop. 66,215

WHITBY, Yorks., a municipal borough, seaport, and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It is a favourite watering place, with many fine villas and terraces, and various attractions. The town contains a custom house, public baths, assembly rooms, a temperance hall, a literary and philosophical society, with an excellent museum, a mechanics' institute, a town-hall, a poorhouse, a dispensary, several charitable and educational establishments, a subscription library, and a commodious news-room. The parish church is an ancient edifice, which stands on the top of a high cliff, and contains a handsome monument over the grave of General Lascelles, who was a native of this town. The town also contains other churches, a chapel-of-ease, and several chapels for Nonconformists. Of the ancient abbey of Whitby, nothing now remains but portions of the walls of the abbey church. This venerable ruin stands in a commanding situation, on a high cliff. The town owes its importance to the discovery of the alum mine at Guisborough, at the close of the reign of Elizabeth. Other alum works were opened within 3 miles of Whitby, and in consequence of this extended speculation a great impulse was given to the trade of the port, which was then constantly visited by vessels bringing coal for the supply of the works, and receiving cargoes of alum to be taken to different parts of England and the Continent. About the beginning of the 18th century two piers were built to protect the harbour from the violence of storms. The pier which projects into the North Sea from the west bank of the river is nearly 1000 feet in length, and has a lighthouse at the end, which terminates in a strong rounded head, with embrasures for a battery. By these breakwaters the entrance of the harbour is well secured, but during strong gales from the north there is still a great swell in the outer harbour. The inner harbour, above the drawbridge constructed over the Esk, is, however, capacious and safe. There are large yards and docks for shipbuilding, which is carried on here to a considerable extent, on both sides of the river, and there are also some commodious dry docks. Jet is collected on the sea coast, and manufactured into ornaments. This town has suffered much from storms, particularly in 1787, when a strong and newly built quay, supporting a pile of buildings 80 feet above the level of the sea, was destroyed by the violence of the waves. Market day, Saturday. Pop. 13,274

WHITEHAVEN, Cumb., a municipal and parliamentary borough, seaport, and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town contains three churches, several chapels for Nonconformists, besides meeting houses, a Roman Catholic chapel, a public dispensary, a marine school, some charity schools, a town-hall, market house, news-rooms, mechanics' institute, baths, custom house, library, and a house of correction or bridewell. The town owes its present thriving condition to the improvements of its harbour, which is protected by a pier, and defended by forts and detached batteries. At the entrance of the harbour are two lighthouses. The coal works being near the sea, are very convenient for shipping. Some of these mines are wrought a great distance under the sea, and others beneath the town. The exportation of coals to Ireland is a great source of wealth to Whitehaven; but its trade has extended to Africa, America, the West Indies, and almost every commercial town in Europe. Whitehaven returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 18,044

WIGHT, ISLE OF, Hants., a beautiful island situated off the coast of Hampshire, and is separated from Portsmouth and Southampton by the waters of the Solent. Its climate is genial, attracting many visitors and invalids. The island is a great centre for yachting. A range of high hills extends through the middle of it, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep, and commands views over every part of the isle, as well as the ocean and the beautiful coasts of Hampshire. The face of the country is greatly diversified; bold hills of various elevations, intersected by rich and highly-cultivated vales; swelling headlands, and wooded glens appear in quick succession to animate and give interest to the scenery. The land around the coast is in some parts high, particularly on the south, or back of the island, as it is commonly termed, being, at St Catherine's, about 830 feet above the level of the sea. These cliffs are frequented by immense numbers of marine birds. The principal rivers are the Medina, which divides it into two nearly equal portions, the Eastern Yar or Brading, and the Western Yar. All the principal crops are successfully grown. Fish of all kinds are found on the coast, and in considerable abundance. The lobster and crab are of uncommon size, and extremely fine. The Isle of Wight prawns and cockles are celebrated. All the higher parts of the island are composed of an immense mass of calcareous matter, of a chalky nature, lying on schistus. The limestone is burned for manure. Some small beds of coal have also been discovered near Alum Bay. Freestones of several descriptions are found, but none of superior quality; and red and yellow ochres are dug in different parts of the island. Native alum is found in large quantities in Alum Bay. Here also, and at Freshwater, are immense beds of micaceous or silvery sand, great quantities of which are annually shipped off for the glass and china manufactories of London, Bristol, and Worcester. Small masses of native sulphur are frequently picked up on different parts of the shore, as well as copperas stones, and pipe-clay is likewise very plentiful in certain districts. There are also several chalybeate springs. It has a considerable trade, the harbour of Cowes being particularly convenient for shipping and unshipping merchandise. West Cowes (q.v.) is the principal seaport. Isle of Wight returns one member to Parliament. Area, 99,200 acres. Pop. 78,718

WILTON, Wilts., an ancient municipal borough and market town, has R. S., and P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Salisbury. The principal public buildings are the parish church, a magnificent building in the Lombardic style of architecture, erected by the late Lord Herbert of Lea at a cost of £20,000, and the town-hall. The old church, which once formed part of Wilton Abbey, is not used for divine service, but the churchyard is still used as a cemetery. There are also some chapels for Nonconformists, a free school, and almshouses for poor people. The town was formerly famous for its carpets and woollens; but these manufactures have declined of late years, although they are still carried on. Market day, Wednesday. Pop. 2120

WILTSHIRE, an inland county, bounded on the north and north-west by Gloucestershire, south-west by Dorsetshire, south and east by Hampshire, north-east by Berkshire, and west by Somersetshire. Wiltshire abounds in the most curious and interesting remains of periods of which we possess no authentic or reliable history. Of these, the most remarkable are the circles of immense stones at Avebury and Stonehenge, both of which are commonly regarded as Druidical temples. Wiltshire may be said to be naturally divided into two portions by an irregular range of hills, which extends transversely through the greater part of the county. These districts are usually denominated South and North Wiltshire. The south is indented by numerous and frequently extensive valleys, and display an almost continual series of gentle eminences, with a bolder height here and there which rises above the others, but never attains any great height In some parts the hills assume the form of rounded knolls, and are separated by smooth-sided hollows, and at other places they exhibit a series of connected ridges. The north part of the county differs completely from the south division in its general appearance, and includes many extensive tracts of rich pasture land, which are chiefly situated on the banks of the Lower Avon and the Thames. It comprises a considerable quantity of arable land, and presents the appearance of a beautiful flat, open country, studded with numerous towns and villages. The climate is usually mild in the north, but in the south, upon the open downs, the air is generally cold and sharp. The Thames, the Upper and Lower Avon, the Bourn, the Wily, the Nadder, and the Kennet are the principal rivers. The county is also intersected by the Thames and Severn Canal, which passes through a very small portion of the north part of Wiltshire; and the Kennet and Avon Canal. Great flocks of sheep and cattle are fed and reared, and large quantities of butter are made at the numerous dairy farms. Pigs are also reared in vast numbers, and sent to the large markets in the south of England. Wheat and barley are grown on the high white lands, while in the valleys green crops are grown for the maintenance of sheep and cattle during the winter months. Chalk occupies the greater part of the county. It has numerous manufactures, consisting of flannels and fancy woollen fabrics, cutlery and steel goods, dowlas and bed-ticks, broad cloths and kerseymeres, cotton goods, fustians, silks, carpets, and gloves. Wiltshire returns five members to Parliament. Area, 865,052 acres. Pop. 255,120

WINCHELSEA, Sussex, a decayed town, has R. S., and P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Rye. It is a place of great antiquity, and was once a populous and flourishing town, but it is now greatly reduced. The ancient town was finally submerged by the sea. It stood at the mouth of the Rother, 2 miles distant from the present town. Pop. 116

WINCHENDON, NETHER, Bucks., par., 6 miles from Aylesbury R. S. Pop. 272

WINCHESTER, Hants., an ancient municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and city, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. Most of the buildings are old, but many are pictaresque in appearance. The cathedral is one of the most interesting buildings in England. It has some instructive examples of architecture of the Saxon, Norman, and English styles, but particularly of the latter, both in its early and improved state. It has been rebuilt, and improved from time to time, and is 545 feet in length from east to west; the length of the nave, from the west porch to the iron door at the entrance of the choir, being 351 feet, the length of the choir 140 feet, and the length of the chapel of Our Lady 54 feet; the breadth of the nave is 87 feet, that of the choir 40 feet, while the entire width of the building, along the transepts from north to south, is 186 feet, and the height of the central tower about 140 feet. The interior of this cathedral is magnificent. It contains the tomb of William Rufus, and, in a series of carved chests over the choir, are the remains of many of the kings of Wessex and of the Saxon kings of England. Its altar-piece is the celebrated "Raising of Lazarus," by West. The ecclesiastical buildings in this city and its suburbs were formerly extremely numerous. Among the few which still remain the most ancient is that of St Lawrence; there are also the churches of St Thomas, St Maurice, St Michael's, St Swithin's, St Peter's, St John's, St Martin's, and others, many of which have either been rebuilt or restored. At a short distance north-east from the college are the ruins of the celebrated Episcopal residence called Wolvesey Castle. Winchester Castle, of which but little now remains, was built by William the Conqueror in a commanding position, where the king's house or palace, erected by Charles II., now stands. This building, however, has been turned into commodious barracks, and the chapel belonging to the castle has been converted into a county hall. At the east end, over the judge's bench, is suspended the famous curiosity called King Arthur's Round Table, which tradition has ascribed to King Arthur, but modern inquiry, with more accuracy, to King Stephen, who appears to have introduced the use of the round table into this island, to prevent disputes for precedence among the chivalrous knights of his age. About a mile from the city is the hospital of St Cross, founded by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester. The restoration of the fine old church belonging to this hospital was completed in 1865. In the High Street stands the city cross, an elegant specimen of the style adopted for these structures about the time of Henry VI., in whose reign it was built. The town has a college, or almshouse, founded by Bishop Morley for the reception of poor and aged widows of clergymen, and Symond's College for a matron and six old men. Besides these there are a number of charitable institutions, and three well-endowed charity schools. Winchester College, or St Mary's College, founded by William of Wickham, on the site of an old grammar school, is one of the five great public schools of England. It is situated to the south-east of the town, and is connected with New College, Oxford. The town also possesses a public infirmary, and a town-hall, in which are the city archives, and the original Winchester bushel, given by King Edgar, with other measures both for quantity and length, fixed as standards by succeeding kings of England, and various curious memorials of antiquity. Besides these, there are a spacious county gaol, in the court of which there is a neat chapel; a bridewell for the city, a public library, a mechanics' institute, a market house, a nunnery, removed hither from Brussels; an assembly room, called St John's Hall, a corn exchange, and a masonic hall. At the west end of the town is an obelisk, bearing an inscription commemorative of the calamities occasioned by the plagues in 941, 1348, and 1666. During the reign of Egbert, who was crowned here, it became the metropolis of the kingdom, but was soon rivalled by London, which was rapidly rising in importance. Its commerce was also obstructed by various adverse accidents; and in the reign of Henry VIII. it received another blow in the dissolution of monasteries, and the consequent destruction of its numerous religious houses; after which it retained scarcely anything more than a mere shadow of its former grandeur. Winchester returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 19,027

WINDSOR, Berks., a municipal and parliamentary borough and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The town is pleasantly situated on an eminence rising from the Thames. The principal public buildings are the guildhall, a stately fabric, supported by columns and arches of Portland stone, and the room in which the corporation meets for the transaction of public business is spacious and convenient. It contains the portraits of the sovereigns of England, from James I. to Queen Anne. The parish church is a large and handsome Gothic building; there are also district churches, a Roman Catholic church, several chapels for Nonconformists, some almshouses, a free school, and a hospital for sick soldiers. Extensive and convenient barracks were built here in 1795 for infantry; and a large building has since been erected for 400 cavalry. The principal ornament of the town is the castle, the favourite residence of Queen Victoria, which owes its origin to William the Conqueror. Henry I. considerably improved the edifice which his father had erected, and having made some extensive additions to the original building, he surrounded the whole with a strong wall for greater security. Great improvements were subsequently made by Edward III., which extended to nearly the whole of the ancient fabric. It is most delightfully situated on the hill on which the town is built, the base of which towards the north is washed by the waters of the Thames, and the scenery is extensive and beautiful. On the south the view is bounded by the wild and picturesque scenery of Windsor Forest. On the declivity of the hill on which the castle is built is a terrace, 1870 feet in length, built by Queen Elizabeth, and faced with a rampart of freestone. Adjoining this walk is a gate leading into the park, which is four miles in circumference, and surrounded by a brick wall. The castle is divided into two courts and wards, with a large round tower or keep between them, the whole occupying about 12 acres of land, and having many batteries and towers for its defence. The upper court is a spacious quadrangle, composed of the round tower on the west, several private apartments occupied by the Royal family on the south and east, with the state apartments which are usually shown to strangers; and St George's Hall and the Chapel Royal on the north. The keep or tower, which is the lodging of the constable or governor, is built in the form of an amphitheatre, and ascended by a flight of stone steps. In this tower is the guard-room, or magazine for arms, ornamented with weapons, which are tastefully but curiously arranged. The lower court, and the largest of the two, is divided into two parts by St George's Chapel, which stands in the middle, and is an admirable specimen of Gothic architecture Almost every room in this division of the castle is ornamented with paintings. The chapel of St George's was erected by Edward III., on the site of a smaller structure built by Henry I., and dedicated to Edward the Confessor. Its present magnificent appearance, however, may be attributed to Henry IV., by whom it was very considerably enlarged, and rendered one of the most beautiful structures of that era. In the reigns of Henry VII. and his successor it underwent several alterations, and it was greatly improved towards the close of the 18th century by the munificence of George III. Considerable alterations and improvements have also been made both in the chapel and the castle in the reign of Queen Victoria. The chapel has been the burial-place of several royal and illustrious personages. At the east end of the north aisle the remains of Edward IV. are deposited. Henry VI. was also buried in this chapel. Under the choir lie the bodies of Henry VIII., Jane Seymour, Charles I., and a daughter of Queen Anne. Many other distinguished persons are also interred within this fabric. Adjoining the east end is a building erected by Henry VII. as a burial-place for himself and his successors. This chapel, called Wolsey's Chapel, has been beautifully restored and ornamented with mosaics and painted glass, in memory of the late Prince Consort. On the south side of the town is Windsor Great Park, well stocked with deer, and comprising about 10,000 acres. To the west of this is Windsor Forest, having a circumference of 56 miles. The markets of Windsor are well supplied, and the town is famous for its ale; but the inhabitants derive their chief means of support from the presence of the Court. Windsor returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 12,327

WOOLWICH, Kent, a municipal borough and naval port, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It was originally a small village, inhabited by fishermen. It owes its rise to the establishment of a royal dock in its immediate vicinity in the reign of Henry VIII. Since that time it has gradually risen to its present importance; but its progress has been more particularly rapid during the past century, in consequence of the establishment of the Royal Arsenal, and the augmentation of the Royal Artillery and Royal Marines, for which corps Woolwich is one of the principal stations. Its dockyard, which was the most ancient in the kingdom, and was supplied with all that is necessary for building and equipping ships of war, was closed in 1869, but it is still used as a military store depot. The government establishments are the Royal Artillery barracks, the Royal Marine barracks, the Royal Sappers and Miners' barracks, the Royal Arsenal, and the Royal Ordnance Hospital. The model room, an important department of the Royal Arsenal, contains a pattern of every article made use of in the artillery service. The parish church, dedicated to St Mary Magdalen, is a large and spacious building of brick. Besides this there are some other churches, and a proprietary chapel, several chapels for Nonconformists, a town-hall, several schools, a mechanics' institute, reading rooms, and public baths. The military and civil branches of the Board of Ordnance, which now forms a department of the War Office, was transferred from Moorfields to Woolwich in 1716. This arsenal is the grand national depot for every species of ordnance, both military and naval, covering more than 100 acres, and containing about 25,000 pieces of cannon of different kinds. It is the largest and most complete arsenal in the world, and has extensive stores of gun-carriages, military waggons, and everything which appertains to the Ordnance department. It is the headquarters of the Royal Horse and Foot Artillery, and the Royal Sappers and Miners, for whom, together with the corps of Royal Marines, extensive barracks are provided. To the south-east of Woolwich Common is the Royal Military Academy, which dates from 1741, and is the oldest military school in the kingdom. There is a parade in front of the barracks, on the east side of which is the Ordnance Hospital, a large and spacious building, calculated to contain about 700 men. Several detached buildings, for the use of the artillery, have been raised on different parts of the common, among which we may mention a veterinary hospital; but the most conspicuous of these is a circular building called the Rotunda, a museum of military antiquities, which is used as a repository for models and weapons of all kinds in use at various periods of English history. It is 120 feet in diameter, and was removed to its present site from the gardens of Carlton House, where it served as a banqueting room, in which the Prince Regent entertained the sovereigns who visited this country after the battle of Waterloo. On the west side of the town there are some more barracks and a handsome hospital. In the Thames, opposite the late dockyard, are the hulks, for the reception of convicts sentenced to transportation and to hard labour for life, or any limited period. The men detained in these prison vessels are employed on Government works. Woolwich returns one member to Parliament. Pop. 40,848

WORCESTER, Worc., one of the most ancient Episcopal cities, a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and the county town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. It was a fortified place of some importance in olden times, and was surrounded by a very strong wall, of which some remains may yet be seen. The cathedral is very ancient, and contains many handsome monuments, and is adorned with a variety of sculptures, and windows of stained glass. A triennial musical festival is held in this city in turn with Gloucester and Hereford. One of the principal objects of interest in the city is Edgar's Tower, a part of the ancient castle, which is now partly occupied by the registrar's office. The bishop's palace stands near the cathedral, in a most commanding situation on the banks of the Severn, which flows at the bottom of the garden. The town also contains several chapels for Nonconformists, several parish and district churches. The other public buildings are the guildhall, the county and city gaol, the market house, diocesan training college, county infirmary, county courts, subscription library, corn hall, skin hall, and numerous market halls, including a hop market. Among its educational institutions are Queen Elizabeth's grammar school, the diocesan training college at Saltley, and a Government school of design. There are also various charitable institutions, and several hospitals and almshouses, including a lying-in hospital, the ophthalmic institution, and a female penitentiary. It contains an athenæum, and several literary and scientific societies. It manufactures gloves, lace, porcelain, leather, spirits, British wines, vinegar, horsehair, cloth, boots and shoes, nails, artificial manures, cast-iron goods, and turned wares. It is also the centre of a large trade in hops and corn. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Worcester returns one member to Parliament. Pop. 42,908

WORCESTERSHIRE is an inland county, very near the centre of the kingdom, bounded on the north and north-west by Staffordshire and Shropshire, on the south by Gloucestershire, on the east by Warwickshire, and on the west by Herefordshire. Worcestershire was known to the Romans, and formed a part of the kingdom of Mercia under the Anglo-Saxon Heptarchy. The country is level in the centre and hilly on either side towards the east and west. The scenery in some parts of the county is very beautiful, while the soil, especially in the central plain, is rich and productive. The air is generally pure and mild, though in some parts, as on the north-west range of the Broadway Hills, it is cold and bleak. The Malvern Hills, though nothing more than sheep walks, possess a most healthy climate; and the north-west parts of the county, especially about Abberley, though of equal elevation to any other district, seem to have a much warmer aspect than either the Lickey or Broadway Hills. The soil is various, consisting chiefly of rich loamy sand, mixed with a small proportion of gravel. The Severn, Avon, Salwarp, Stour, and Teme flow through the county, the Severn being navigable from Bewdley to Tewkesbury. There are also several canals and railways, which are of the utmost importance in extending its export and import trade and commercial transactions with other parts of England. The whole county is well adapted for agriculture, and there are extensive sheep walks, and productive tillage ground; it is also a hop and fruit-growing centre. Pershore and district is the chief plum-growing centre in the kingdom; pears and apples are also grown in enormous quantities. Perry and cider are made. Cattle and sheep are imported from Herefordshire and South Wales, and fattened on the rich pasture lands of this county for the London market and other markets in the midland and south counties of England. Coal and freestone are found. At Droitwich there are most productive salt pits, from which great quantities of salt are taken every year. Worcestershire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 472,165 acres. Pop. 422,515

YARMOUTH, OR GREAT YARMOUTH, Norf., a seaport and market town, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. A much-frequented watering-place, and a flourishing seaport with important fishings. It stands on a peninsula, having the sea on the east, and on the west the Yare and the Bure. The latter of these rivers is crossed by a suspension bridge, and the former by a handsome drawbridge, which affords communication with South Town or Little Yarmouth, and with Gorleston. It was once surrounded by walls, of which there are a few remains. The town is now defended by some detached batteries on the coast. Besides the parish churches, there are churches for the beachmen and wherrymen, a Jews' synagogue, a Roman Catholic chapel, several chapels for Nonconformists, custom house, a townhall, guildhall, assembly and reading-rooms, a club-house, two hospitals, baths, a proprietary school and other educational establishments, a sailors' home, public library, a lunatic asylum, which was built as barracks for troops, and a column to the memory of Lord Nelson, which stands on the beach to the south of the town. Besides these public structures, there is the esplanade fronting the sea, which affords a pleasant promenade, being planted with trees. Yarmouth has long been much frequented as a fashionable watering-place, and furnishes every accommodation for the health, comfort, and amusement of its visitors. Its harbour is secure, and is provided with lighthouses. There is the Britannia Pier 750 feet long. The coast upon which Yarmouth stands is the most dangerous in Britain, and has been often the scene of the most disastrous shipwrecks. It is advantageously situated for commerce, especially with the north of Europe, and it is the principal seat of the English herring fishery, and has also a considerable trade in coals, timber, barley, salt, and the produce of the British colonies. Great Yarmouth returns one member to Parliament. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 49,334

YORK, Yorks., an Episcopal city, municipal and parliamentary borough, and market town, pleasantly situated at the junction of the rivers Foss and Ouse, which, in point of rank, though not in commercial importance, is held as the second city in the kingdom, has R. S., and a head P. O. with all depts. The principal glory of York is the Minster, the greater part of which was built in the 13th and 14th centuries. It is 524 feet from east to west in length, and 250 feet in breadth along the transepts from north to south. The great tower, which rises from the intersection of the nave and transepts, is 234 feet in height. It has a magnificent west front, flanked by two towers 196 feet high, and the whole building is richly adorned within. The east end, being of somewhat later date than the west, displays a more florid style of architecture, adorned with elegant niches and crowned with airy pinnacles. The great east window of beautiful decorated stained glass is almost unrivalled in beauty and magnitude. Over the window is a statue of Archbishop Thoresby, the founder of the choir. The great tower, or lantern, is supported within by four massive columns. The nave and side aisles afford a superb specimen of the style of architecture which prevailed in the latter years of the reign of Henry III. The screen, which separates the nave from the choir, is a very curious piece of workmanship; but its history is unknown. The chapter-house is a magnificent structure. The vestry contains many curious and ancient relics of great interest to the antiquarian. The city and the surrounding district called Ainsty is under the jurisdiction of a lord mayor, twelve aldermen, and thirty-six councillors. Besides the cathedral there are parish churches and chapels for Roman Catholics and Nonconformists. The castle of York, with its picturesque Clifford's Tower, is of great antiquity. It is situated close to the river. The assize courts are now held here. The county hall is a large and spacious building. The other buildings are the mansion-house, the corporation board room, the guildhall, regarded as one of the finest Gothic edifices in the kingdom, the assembly room, concert hall, free library, opened by the Duke of York, Yorkshire philosophical society, which possesses a fine building in the Grecian style of architecture, containing a lecture room, theatre, library, and museum; Freemasons' Hall, festival concert room, the county hospital, the York lunatic asylum, the Retreat, another institution for the insane, managed by the Society of Friends; cavalry barracks, the residence of the archbishop, and the palace of Bishopsthorpe, the cathedral grammar school, the York collegiate school, the diocesan training college for national schoolmasters, a school for the blind, an eye infirmary, a penitentiary, and a variety of educational and charitable institutions, including several hospitals, almshouses, and asylums for aged men and women, maiden ladies in poor circumstances, widows, and orphans. There are also several markets and baths, with a large swimming bath, having a superficial area of more than an acre and a half. York returns two members to Parliament. Market days, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 67,004

YORKSHIRE, the largest county of England, bounded east by the German Ocean, south by the river Humber, which separates it from Lincolnshire, and by the counties of Nottingham, Derby, and Cheshire; west by Lancashire and Westmoreland, and north by the county of Durham. Area of whole county, 3,830,567 acres. Pop. 3,218,749. It is divided into three Ridings, the North, the East, and the West, each of which has its own lord-lieutenant, magistracy, and constabulary. There are eleven wapenstakes in the North, nine in the West, and six in the East Riding. Yorkshire returns twenty-six members to Parliament.

The North Riding is bounded north by the river Tees, which separates it from the county of Durham, north-east and east by the German Ocean, south-east and south by the East Riding, the Ainsty or Liberty of the city of York, and the West Riding; and west by the county of Westmoreland. The surface of the country, from Scarborough northward, is bold and hilly, the cliffs along the coast being generally high. At Stoupe Brow, about 10 miles north of that place, they are said to rise to the height of 893 feet. Inland from these crags successive hills range one above another, until the elevated and dreary tract of the Eastern Moorlands is reached, which occupies a space of about 30 miles from east to west, by 15 from north to south, and is intersected here and there by picturesque and fertile dales. The Vale of York, or Valley of the Ouse, with some irregularities of surface, slopes southward from the Tees as far as York, where it expands into a plain which is almost level in every part. Of this tract, the north part is bounded on either side by the Moorlands. except where it opens into Cleveland, or is divided from Ryedale by the Howardian Hills. Within 10 miles of York, however, it expands into a wider breadth, extending eastward as far as the Wolds in the East Riding, and to the Humber on the south. The Western Moorlands form a part of the long range of mountains which stretch in a northern direction from Staffordshire to Scotland. These being chiefly calcareous, surpass those in the east part of the Riding in point of fertility; and various rich and beautiful valleys are found among the mountains in this part of the county. Among these the principal is Wensleydale, a tract abounding in fine pasture lands, through which the Ure winds its way towards its junction with the Swale, forming, in some places, beautiful cascades. Next to Wensleydale in extent is Swaledale; though, from the circumstances of its being much narrower, and bounded by hills of a much steeper ascent, it is considered by many to possess scenery of a far more romantic character. The smaller dales, which are numerous, exhibit the same general appearance. The principal rivers of the North Riding are the Swale, the Ure, the Ouse, the Tees, and the Derwent, with numerous tributaries. It is chiefly celebrated as a grazing country. Of the different minerals of the North Riding, the alum rock, on the east edge of the Eastern Moorlands, and the lead in the district of Richmondshire, are the most important. Several parts of these Moorlands appear to contain large quantities of ironstone, limestone, and freestone. Area, 350,121 acres. Pop. 360,383.

The East Riding is bounded on the north and north-west by the rivers Hertford and the Derwent, which separate it from the North Riding, as far as the vicinity of Stamford Bridge. An irregular line from the Derwent to the Ouse, commencing about a mile from that place, and joining the latter river a little below York, forms the remainder of the boundary on the north-west between these two Ridings. From that point it is bounded on the west and south-west by the Ouse, which divides it from the West Riding; on the south by the Humber, and on the east by the German Ocean. This division, though far less conspicuously marked by the bolder features of nature than the other parts of the county, contains scenery of extreme picturesque beauty and magnificence, especially where the sea or the Humber enters into the view. It may be considered as three different districts; the Wolds. a range of chalky hills which extend from north to south through nearly the whole of the Riding; and the two level tracts which lie to the east and west of them respectively. In few parts of England has agriculture been conducted on a more extensive scale, or brought to a higher degree of perfection, than in this riding of Yorkshire, particularly upon the Wolds. The Hull, the Ouse, and the Derwent are the principal rivers. Wheat, barley, oats, and all the different kinds of green crops are produced in the highest perfection. Cattle and sheep are reared and fed on the Wolds and in other parts of the Riding. Wool is supplied in large quantities to the West Riding clothiers; and great numbers of horses are purchased at York and Howden fairs by the London dealers. Area, 768,419 acres. Pop. 341,546.

The West Riding is bounded north by the North Riding, east by the East Riding and Lincolnshire, south and south-west by Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, and Cheshire, and west by Lancashire and Westmoreland. This Riding may be divided into three extensive districts, varying from a level and marshy tract on the east to a rough and mountainous region on the west. The level part, of unequal breadth, extends westward from its east side, along the banks of the Ouse, to within three or four miles of an imaginary line drawn from Doncaster to Sherburn. The district in the centre rises gradually into hills, and is beautifully diversified; after which, proceeding still farther in a western direction, the surface becomes extremely rugged and barren. Beyond Sheffield, black moors, running to the north-west, unite to the lofty hills of Blackstone Edge, on the borders of Lancashire; while the western part of Craven presents a confused heap of rocks and mountains; among which Pennigant, Ingleborough, and Wharnside or Whernside, stands pre-eminently conspicuous. Amidst these dreary regions, however, there are many romantic valleys, which present the most picturesque and beautiful scenery; the greater part of them being enclosed, well wooded, and thickly studded with flourishing and almost continuous villages. The Wharfe, Calder, Ribble, Aire, and Don are the principal rivers. Wheat is the principal crop, and timber is abundant. In the middle and west parts of the West Riding large quantities of coal, ironstone, and lead are found, with vast quarries of limestone. The soil in this extensive district includes almost every variety, from deep strong clay and rich loam to the most barren species of peat earth. This division of Yorkshire may safely be pronounced one of the greatest manufacturing districts in the kingdom. On every side the raw materials abound; and coals are plentiful and cheap. These manufactures, carried on principally at Leeds, Wakefield, Bradford, Halifax, Huddersfield, and the neighbouring towns and villages, comprise broad and narrow cloths of all qualities, shalloons, calimancoes, and flannels, with every kind of woollen goods. From Sheffield, cutlery and plated goods are exported to all parts of the world. Area, 1,709,307 acres. Pop 2,439,895

Patrons*—

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
THEIR R.H. THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

President*—

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

THE Education Committee of the Society earnestly appeal to clergymen and ministers of every religious denomination to bring before their schools and congregations the claims of animals. To cultivate kindness of heart towards inferior creatures is to prepare for the more easy introduction of Christianity.

The Committee are advised that the Fourth Sunday after Trinity is a suitable day for pleading the cause of the lower animal creation in the Church of England; because, (1) of the appropriateness of the Collect on that day; (2) in the Epistle to the Romans viii. 18, we shall read that "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now"; and (3) in the Gospel of Luke vi. 36, we shall read that we are commanded to be "merciful, as our Father also is merciful." Any time is suitable, however, and this remark applies particularly to Nonconformist Churches of all denominations, where it is desirable to plead the cause of the Society, which is neither sectarian nor political.

Upon this Institution, founded in 1824 (the only one having for its object the protection of dumb and defenceless animals), rests a heavy responsibility. It is earnestly and respectfully submitted, that it has in consequence a strong claim upon the benevolence of the humane and charitable.

The Committee respectfully appeal to the Public to extend a hearty assistance,—

I. By supplying early information to the Secretary of all acts of cruelty that have been witnessed.

II. By increasing the revenue of the Society by annual subscriptions, by donations, by testamentary gifts, and particularly by inducing their friends to become members.

Trained officers are despatched to all parts of the Kingdom. Upwards of 7,500 convictions obtained annually.

The increased operations of the Society have drawn from the funds an amount vastly exceeding the yearly subscriptions. The Committee need much greater assistance, and unless such additional support be extended to them, this most righteous cause of humanity must suffer from insufficiency of means to carry out those many urgent measures which every well-wisher of this Society has so deeply at heart. Remittances may be forwarded to JOHN COLAM, Secretary.

SUPPORTED ONLY BY VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS.

The labour of other Charities is divided among many Associations; but this Charity stands alone—the Defender of the Defenceless—without any assistant.

PARKERS' PATENT CARDING CAN.

THE Patentees beg to call the attention of Cotton Spinners and others to their Patent Carding Can, and to point out that the great defect in the manufacture of the same hitherto has been the tendency to bulge or fracture immediately above the binder, owing to their hard, careless use, hence the expense in repairs, their canting or loss of perpendicularity.

The Patentees are confident they have remedied the defect referred to, by the invention of their Patent Solid Bottom, which, being pressed out of a square sheet of 16s W.G. Siemens' steel, not only acts as binder and ring combined, but the elongation of the four corners of the steel sheet (see section) strengthen and support the weakest portion of the Can, thus overcoming the objections referred to, and adding years to the life of the same.

In addition to the above improvement, the Can is passed through a Patent Embossing Machine, which gives it treble the strength of the ordinary Can; and it is also provided with a Patent Grooved Top Ring, the top of the Can being swaged into the said groove, which renders the ring almost immovable.

Notwithstanding its recent introduction, this Can is on its trial in upwards of three hundred mills, repeat orders having been received from many of them, and we solicit a trial order that its durability and finish may be compared with any other Carding Can in the market.

"OTTEKOTE"

TRADE MARK.

THE "OTTEKOTE" is a registered title of a New Waterproof Coating, proofed on the latest and best principles, the distinctive object of which is that, though rainproof, even in the heaviest storm, it allows free escape to the moist vapours of the body. There is none of the clamminess and other unpleasant features about it that an ordinary Mackintosh has, and it is not subject to cause Rheumatism through perspiration accumulating inside the garment.

DRY, HYGIENIC, and COMFORTABLE, and is made up in the Latest Shades.

To be obtained from all the leading Wholesale Houses in London, Glasgow, Dublin, Cork, and Manchester.

Every Garment made of the "Ottekote" Rainproof Cloth bears a label inside, and is Guaranteed as long as the Garment lasts.

Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks.

Secured and registered in all countries on the most moderate terms compatible with thorough painstaking execution.

Pamphlet of Fees and Regulations for Patenting forwarded Post Free.

The members of the firm of W. P. Thompson & Co. are all Practical Engineers, and have a thorough knowledge of the Patent Laws, both English and Foreign. They are thus able to bring to bear upon inventions brought before them a thorough Practical, Technical, and Legal knowledge, which is placed at the service of clients in advising them with reference to their Patents or Inventions, and in drafting the Specifications for Patents.

The Inventor's attendance in Manchester, Liverpool, or London is not necessary, as all business can be done by correspondence. W. P. T. & Co. are, however, always glad to have personal interviews with their clients.

Inventors at a distance wishing to patent an invention, should send full description of it, with drawing, sketch, or model. Carriage of models, &c., must, however, be prepaid.

NOTE.—Abridgments of all English Patent Specifications and of all existing American ones, with plates, and Copies of all Trade Marks registered in this country, kept on file at our Liverpool office and at the Libraries adjacent to our Manchester and London Offices.

W. P. THOMPSON & CO. are believed to have at the present time the largest Provincial Patent Agency Practice in England. Their foreign connections also, and facilities for international work, are unsurpassed by those of any other firm.

MÖLLER'S GENUINE LAGER

IN CASKS OR BOTTLES.

MÖLLER'S LAGER BEER

Is a delicious luxury that all can afford to buy, because of its reasonable price. That it is the lightest and best Beer to drink nas never been denied by any competent judge; and its lightness enables persons to whom a glass of English Beer is denied to slake their thirst with this genuine Lager Beer, without fear of after-effects, on account of the small quantity of alcohol it contains.

CORK CLOTHING FACTORY.

HOME MANUFACTURES SUCCESSFUL.

Men's, Youths', & Boys' Clothing for Spring & Summer.

Better Made, Better Fitting, and Cheaper than any Imported Goods.

It is now generally admitted that the Goods Manufactured at the "Cork Clothing Factory" are Superior to any other make known to the Trade, while the prices are as low as the most inferior. This superiority has been attained chiefly by employing the best modern labour-saving machinery, and having all the work done in the Factory under capable and careful supervision, instead of subdividing amongst sweaters, as is customary elsewhere. The production has been nearly doubled for the past two years, but as it has still been inadequate to our requirements, we have made further extensions to enable us to execute our orders promptly during the coming season.

THIS well-known Directory contains exhaustive classified lists of the Manufacturers, Traders, Merchants, Agents, and Dealers in upwards of Five Hundred Irish Cities, Towns, and Villages, besides a comprehensive Gazetteer Section, giving the location, population, and other local statistics for the Cities, Towns, Villages, and Parishes, with Postal, Telegraphic, Railway, and Shipping Information. The usefulness of the work is enhanced by copious lists of Merchants and Traders in Liverpool and Glasgow,—the British Cities which have the most extensive trade with Ireland. The whole of the information is thoroughly revised every year by a staff of qualified compilers, solely employed on the Company's Publications, and the work thus brought up to date, and printed from type kept standing (reducing errors to a minimum), is unrivalled as the Standard Directory of Ireland.

PRESS OPINIONS.

Belfast Evening Telegraph

A new Edition of this excellent Directory has been issued, bringing the contents completely up to date. The success of former editions has warranted extensive additions and improvements, while a Gazetteer has been added, thus increasing the usefulness of the book as a work of reference. A further great improvement consists in the inclusion of sections devoted to the cities of Glasgow and Liverpool—the two trans-Channel centres most in touch with the Irish ports. This is an addition which will be widely appreciated.

Scotsman

Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Limited, Edinburgh, have sent out a comprehensive and carefully compiled Trades Directory of the whole of Ireland. . . . well revised and more useful than ever to business men.

Glasgow Herald

. . . The new edition has been thoroughly revised and brought down to date. . . . A section is devoted to directories for Liverpool and Glasgow, the business relations of these cities being considered sufficient reason for this useful addition to a very valuable reference book.

Edinburgh Evening News

The extensive business relations between Scotland and Ireland justify a large circulation for this Directory, which is a model of careful arrangement. Sections are added, dealing with Liverpool and Glasgow firms, and those give a more general value to the Directory. The Gazetteer is a useful addition to the book.

Belfast Irish News

This well-known firm issued some time ago a handsomely-bound "Directory for Ireland" for 1897-98, which has had a great popularity. It is certainly one of the completest works of its kind ever published, and advertisers in all parts of Ireland and across Channel will find a study of it of the greatest advantage for business purposes. It is clearly printed and splendidly bound.

Dundee Advertiser

. . . A practical and carefully compiled trades directory for the whole of Ireland. . . . The work has been thoroughly revised since last issue, and additional sections giving directories of Liverpool and Glasgow are now included in the volume. The book will be of great service to all trading with merchants in Ireland.

Glasgow Citizen

. . . Several new features will be noted in this new Edition. A Gazetteer has been added, and two large sections are devoted to a trade directory of Liverpool and Glasgow, the cities which have the most extensive trade with Ireland. The whole volume has been enlarged, improved, and brought thoroughly up to date, and as it at present stands it is an invaluable compilation for all those business men who have connection with our sister Island.

Northern Whig.

. . . The book is calculated to be very valuable for reference to merchants and manufacturers. Sections devoted to Liverpool and Glasgow will be particularly useful, as the trade relations of Ireland with these ports are so intimate.

. . . It is a desirable work of reference in business centres, and will have considerable appreciation in that connection. The publishers have wisely included sections for Glasgow and Liverpool, and Irish traders will find this convenient. The compilation on the whole is very correct, and the arrangement and letterpress are good.

Irish Times

In the "Irish Directory" merchants and traders will find all the special information for which they have hitherto looked in vain. The book contains the most exhaustive alphabetical and classified lists of the principal merchants, traders, &c., in Irish business towns.

Freeman

Seldom has a work deserved its title better than that which we have now before us; it is, indeed, in the fullest sense, a complete and perfect "Business Directory of Ireland," comprising within its pages compendious alphabetical and classified lists of all the principal manufacturers, merchants, shippers, and traders in all the chief cities, towns, and trade centres The work reflects much credit on the care, industry, and patience employed by its compilers.

We have nothing but praise for the arrangement of the compilation and the excellent taste with which the volume is brought out. We believe that such a work is one that must appeal strongly to the business public of the whole Kingdom, or that part of it having commercial dealings with Ireland.

THIS popular Directory contains classified lists of the Manufacturers, Merchants, Traders, Agents, and Dealers throughout the Kingdom, and embraces over One Thousand Three Hundred Scottish Cities, Towns, and Villages. Each is annually canvassed personally by competent Agents, solely employed on the Company's Publications. The type is kept standing, thus reducing errors to a minimum. In the Gazetteer Section brief notices are given of the Cities, Towns, Parishes, Villages, and other territorial divisions in the Kingdom. Some idea may thus be formed of the labour and cost of collecting and arranging the information, and of the utility of the Work as a reliable Book of Reference.

PRESS OPINIONS.

The Times

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—The work which Messrs Kelly have done so long and so successfully for London, and for England and Wales, Messrs Wm. Macdonald & Co., Ltd., Edinburgh, have accomplished for Scotland and for its two capitals. Many thousand names have been added to this edition. All possible justice is done even to the most distant parts of Scotland. . . . The work is thoroughly business-like in its scope and object.

The Scotsman

"The Scottish Directory and Gazetteer" is a useful and well-arranged book of business addresses covering the whole of Scotland. . . . Much credit is due to the compilers for their enterprise and industry in collecting the information. The general arrangement of the Directory remains the same as before. . . . In this issue the work has been thoroughly revised and brought abreast of recent changes

The Daily Record (Glasgow)

Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Ltd, the Directory and Time-Table specialists, Edinburgh, send us a copy of their "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer," which has been thoroughly revised to date, and now presents trade lists which will probably bear the minutest inspection as to accuracy. At anyrate, in a few rather difficult tests to which we have subjected the Directory, we have found it correct.

Glasgow Herald

. . . The Directory, which has over 1000 pages, is furnished with a general map of Scotland and plans of the leading towns. The Gazetteer portion is a very useful feature, as it contains a list of the towns and villages of Scotland alphabetically arranged, together with brief information regarding population, &c. The book has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date, and the lists have been considerably extended

Birmingham Daily Record

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—Messrs William Macdonald & Co., Ltd., Edinburgh, the Kellys of North Britain, have just issued another annual and much-enlarged edition of their practical, useful, complete, and admirably compiled "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer." . . . Above all, the paper is far superior to that of most publications of the kind, and the book is stoutly bound.

Dundee Advertiser

The edition for 1900 of this valuable work has now been issued. Though there are no new features in this year's volume the arrangement is so complete that there is little left to be desired in this respect. The book is practically a carefully compiled Trades' Directory for Scotland, issued at a reasonable price. The Gazetteer gives in a concise form much topographical information, arranged alphabetically, and is most useful as a book of reference.

Edinburgh Evening News

"Macdonald's Scottish Directory and Gazetteer" is altogether astonishingly comprehensive. The volume is first of all practical, and has been carefully compiled. Since the last edition was issued the Directory has undergone a complete revision, and many new names have been added. . . . The arrangement of the book is good, and it is sure to be of service to business men and the public generally. The index is clear and complete.

Evening Times (Glasgow)

This is one of those bulky volumes which no well appointed office, hotel, or public institution can afford to be without. . . . It contains all the information which a business man requires in a Directory of Scotland. . . . The usefulness of the volume is enhanced by an appended Gazetteer, which gives the leading facts about every city, town, and village in Scotland. It is clearly printed on good paper, and strongly bound in red cloth.

Iron (London)

MACDONALD'S SCOTTISH DIRECTORY.—Messrs Wm. Macdonald & Co., Ltd., occupy in Scotland the position filled by Messrs Kelly & Co. in England, and their "Scottish Directory and Gazetteer," although necessarily not so bulky as the "London Directory," will be found to be as carefully compiled.

Invention

We are very pleased to welcome a new edition of this most useful work. It will be observed that great care has been taken in its compilation. The paper on which this work is printed is wonderfully strong and good, and the whole appearance of the Directory is such as should cause Messrs Kelly to look to their laurels. . . . In conclusion, we may say that all possible justice has been done to the subject-matter dealt with, and the general arrangement of the information contained.

Liverpool Mercury

The work of compilation of this comprehensive Directory has been ably carried out, and should be welcomed by commercial houses seeking a reliable trade directory.

Manchester Guardian

"Macdonald's Scottish Directory" is a useful compilation, which combines a commercial Directory and brief Gazetteer for the whole of Scotland.

Newcastle Chronicle

The present issue, which has been carefully brought up to date, and includes many thousand additional names, fully justifies the claim of the work to take a high place among publications of its kind

Leeds Mercury

A new edition has been issued of this valuable and carefully-compiled work—a bulky volume, each edition being larger than its predecessor.

THIS comprehensive Publication is the largest Directory in the English Language, and contains the Names and Addresses of more Manufacturers, Merchants, Traders, Shippers, Brokers, Agents, Dealers, and others connected with British Trade and Commerce than any other Directory issued from the Press. It includes copious and authentic lists of the Professions, Trades, and Businesses of upwards of Four Thousand Cities, Towns, and Villages in England and Wales, the Isle of Man, and the Channel Islands. Every Name considered of sufficient importance for a wholesale house to solicit custom from, being entered. The mass of information it embraces is not otherwise obtainable without an expenditure of over £40 on Local and County Directories; and as many of these are issued at intervals of several years, their information cannot be so recent and reliable as that given in a work like the ENGLISH DIRECTORY AND GAZETTEER, which is kept standing in type (reducing errors to a minimum), and revised and printed annually, and issued to Subscribers at £2, 10s.—a price not higher than is usually charged for the Directory of a single English County.

The First Volume of the Work consists of a Trades Directory of LONDON, and over Two Hundred Suburban Districts, giving authentic lists of the Professions, Trades, and Businesses of the Metropolis. It also contains a separate and exhaustive Trades Directory for each of the principal Provincial Cities and Towns, arranged as follows:—

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Birmingham | Devonport | Manchester and Salford | Plymouth and Stonehouse | South Shields |
| Blackburn | Gateshead | Middlesbrough | Portsmouth | Stockport |
| Bolton | Halifax | Newcastle-on-Tyne | Preston | Sunderland |
| Bradford | Huddersfield | Northampton | Reading | Swansea |
| Brighton | Hull | Norwich | Rochdale | Walsall |

| Burnley | Leicester | Oldham | Sheffield | York |
| Cardiff | Liverpool and Birkenhead | | Southampton | |
| Derby | | | | |

The Second Volume gives Local Trades Directories for all Towns (excepting the above) and Villages of importance in England, grouped alphabetically under their various Counties; and the forty Counties are also arranged in alphabetical order to facilitate reference. This Volume embraces all Towns and Villages of importance in WALES, which are also grouped alphabetically under their various Counties, and the twelve Counties are arranged in alphabetical order. Trades' Directories for the ISLE OF MAN and the CHANNEL ISLANDS are also included in this Volume.

The Work is further supplemented by a Bank Section, and a concise Gazetteer of England and Wales, giving the location, population, and other local statistics and historical references for the Cities, Towns, Parishes, and Villages, with Postal, Telegraphic, Railway, and Shipping information.

In the course of revising the Work every Town and Village of importance in England and Wales, the Isle of Man, and the Channel Islands are visited annually by experienced Agents, solely employed by the Proprietors for the purpose of verifying, by personal application, every Name appearing in the Directory. Thus every effort that can possibly be made by a large and efficient staff of compilers is put forth ungrudgingly, and regardless of trouble and expense, to bring the information up to date, and to ensure the correctness of the Work.
